Officials Deny Marines Will Leave North China

Report That U. S. Forces Are Getting Out of Tsingtao Scouted in Shanghai

Shanghai (Tuesday), Jan. 4 A.—Official United States sources in Shanghai today denied a report from Tsingtao that American Marines were leaving shore billets to withdraw from that western Pacific anchorage in North China.

These sources expressed belief the report stemmed from the evacuation of a group of shopkeepers at the Marine shore quarters at Shantung University at Tsingtao.

The concessionaires were believed civilians operating many shops in buildings where the Marines had office and living billets. These sources said the Marines had not given up their shore billets and had disclosed no plans for doing so.

The Tsingtao story had said the Marines officially notified university officials that the billets—which had been leased since Japan's surrender in 1945—would be vacated by January 25.

3000 Men Reported About to Board Ship

Shanghai (Tuesday), Jan. 4 (AP).—The United States Marines in Tsingtao announced today their withdrawal from that north China port "since the Chinese government has decided to negotiate for a peace settlement with the Reds."

Naval authorities here said they were messaging Vice Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commander of the Western Pacific Fleet with headquarters at Tsingtao, for a statement.

The Tsingtao announcement said some 3000 Marines would be put aboard naval vessels in the harbor to await further orders.

The announcement detailed steps for abandonment of shore billets at National Shantung University. It said Badger's headquarters would remain at Tsingtao.

"No Longer Needed"

The reason officially given at Tsingtao for the move was that, since the Chinese government "has decided to negotiate for a peace settlement with the Reds, and there is good prospect for peace being restored, the presence of the Marines is no longer needed."

Coinciding with the news from Tsingtao was an announcement in Shanghai that 300 university professors here and in Nanking have submitted to the government a nine-point peace program.

The program calls for (1) a cease-fire order; (2) foreign mediation; (3) nationalization of arms; (4) freedom of speech and of press; (5) an "independent" foreign policy; (6) end of corruption among officials; (7) a planned economy; (8) a practical land policy aiming at "eventual nationalization of land, and (9) a "guaranteed minimum living standard.

Shanghai Contacts Reds

The Shanghai City Council openly radioed a peace plea direct to the Communists Monday—going over the head of President Chiang Kai-shek's unsettled central government in Nanking.

In Nanking itself, Gen. Chang Chih-chung, a leading cabinet member, gave a remarkable "peace" dinner for several hundred public officials, and educators.

House Crushes Coalition; Taft Beats GOP Insurgents

Truman Forces Win Significant Opening Battle

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Administration forces yesterday took over the Eighty-first Congress with a pace-setting victory for the Truman Re-Deal.

Power of the House Rules Committee to block Truman bills was shattered before the new Congress was two hours old.

The precedent-breaking House vote crushed at the outset a once formidable coalition that has been able in the past to stop legislation at will.

Among the first to congratulate Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) on the "victory" was President Truman himself. Mr. Truman drove to the Capitol, and went to Rayburn's first-floor hideaway to pay his "social call."

The rules change was adopted by a noisy voice vote after the coalition failed, 275 to 142, to open up the whole House rules procedure to debate and amendment.

Opening Ceremonial Routine

The test of Truman strength, swinging open the gate for most of the Administration's foreign and domestic program, came after the usual routine opening ceremonials, with new House and Senate officers elected and new members sworn.

Normally a new Congress calls it a day after that, but the House show went on.

Speaker Rayburn, after a speech calling on the House to "live up to the expectations of the American people," recognized Representative Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), new chairman of the Rules Committee.

Sabath moved to adopt the traditional House rules of procedure, with one sharp departure.

This provided that the chairman of any legislative committee, whose regularly reported bill had been sidetracked by the Rules group for 21 days, could go directly to the House for permission to call it up, on the second and fourth Mondays of each month.

The new rule further provided that "the Speaker shall recognize the member seeking recognition for that purpose as a question of the highest privilege."

House Republican steersmen, charging this gave new "czarist" powers to the Speaker, had a substitute rules change ready and Southern Democrats had a motion of their own, providing no change at all.

Neither had a chance to offer or explain their amendments. Sabath moved the "previous question," a privileged motion to cut off all amendments and debate, and Speaker Rayburn ordered the clerk to call the roll.

It was on this vote that the traditional party lines fell. Voting for the motion were 225 Democrats, 49 Republicans and one American-Laborite. Voting "No" were 111 Republicans and only 31 Democrats, mostly from the South.

Viva voce approval of the rules change followed, but it was the party-line test on the Sabath motion that told the story of the November election and its impact on

Senator Reelected Head of Party's Policy Committee

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Senate Republican insurgents, who talked a lot recently about upsetting the Old Guard leadership, went down to a 2-to-1 defeat yesterday afternoon.

By a vote of 28 to 14 the Republican conference reelected Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio) as chairman of the policy committee over Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Mass.), and chose Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), floor leader over Senator William F. Knowland (Calif.).

It chose Senator Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.), one of the insurgents, Republican whip by acclamation, and then, by unanimous vote quickly elected Senator Eugene D. Millikin (Colo.) as chairman of the conference; and Senator Milton R. Young (N. Dak.) as secretary.

Taft's Victory Soon Apparent

Six other members of the policy committee are to be chosen by Chairman Millikin subject to confirmation of the conference, which, under a change in the rules, can reject any or all of the chairman's choices. The same change in the rules increased the number on the policy committee from 9 to 11 by adding the chairman and secretary of the conference to the committee.

The election of Taft and Wherry was by secret ballot, but the vote

Closed Shop Ban by States Is Held Legal

Supreme Court Finds No Denial of Rights In Arizona, Nebraska North Carolina Laws

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

State laws which prohibit the closed shop or other union membership requirements for employment were upheld yesterday by the Supreme Court.

The high court held that the so-called "right-to-work" laws in Arizona, North Carolina and Nebraska do not violate constitutional rights of union members.

These State laws specify that no labor contract or agreement shall deny a person the right to obtain or retain a job because he does not belong to a labor union.

In addition to banning the closed shop, under which only union members may be hired, they are held to prohibit such variations as the union shop, which requires workers to join a union after employment, and "maintenance of membership" provisions which require that those who join unions must remain in good standing for stated periods.

Unanimous in Two Cases

The Labor Department said yesterday that 12 States have similar "anticlosed shop" laws, and four others regulate union membership requirements.

The Supreme Court decision in the Nebraska and North Carolina cases was unanimous, with Justice Murphy dissenting in the Arizona case. Justice Frankfurter wrote a concurring, explanatory opinion for all three cases, while Justice Rutlege in a separate concurring opinion, gave some reservations to his vote. Justice Murphy joined Justice Rutledge in some of these reservations.

Coming at this time, when President Truman—who called for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, which outlaws the closed shop—is preparing his opening message to Congress, the decision has unusual ramifications.

The State laws have been held applicable to interstate, as well as intrastate commerce, under the Taft-Hartley Act, for that act provides that where State laws restrict union membership more severely than the Federal law, the State laws apply.

Justice Black's Opinion

As a result, while the Taft-Hartley Act prohibits the closed shop but permits the union shop after qualifying elections, the National Labor Relations Board has refused to hold such elections where State laws prohibit them, even if interstate commerce is involved.

Justice Black writing the majority opinion in the Nebraska and North Carolina decisions, declared:

"Nothing in the language of the laws indicates a purpose to prohibit speech, assembly or petition. Precisely what these State laws do is to forbid employers acting alone or in concert with labor organizations deliberately to restrict employment to none but union members . . .

"Just as we have held that the due process clause (of the Constitution) erects no obstacle to block legislative protection of union members, we now hold that legislative protection can be afforded nonunion workers."

AFL Brings Suits

In March, 1946, the closed shop law of Florida was upheld by a three-man Federal court and came to the Supreme Court, but the high court sent it back to the State courts for a final ruling there. The Florida Supreme Court upheld it in July, 1947.

The American Federation of Labor, which fought that law, brought the current cases before the Supreme Court. The CIO also joined the protest, stating that the State laws "strike a dangerous blow" at a fundamental trade union principle.

In the North Carolina case, an Asheville contractor and six AFL men were fined for signing an agreement which limited employment to union workers. In the Nebraska case, a metal worker refused to pay union dues, lost union membership, and the union demanded he be fired but the company refused. In the Arizona case, unions unsuccessfully sought injunctions to carry out closed shop contracts.

Opposing the State laws in these cases, the AFL argued that they "do not regulate" but "flatly prohibit" closed shop contract agreements "without providing any substitute or equivalent for the function performed by such agreements in protecting labor organizations and making them effective."

Union leaders deplored such

President Truman will tell Congress in his annual message Wednesday that he wants legislative authority to send military help to certain western European countries and others.

The President will not name the countries to be aided, nor will he estimate at this time how much the help will cost in the coming fiscal year.

By not naming particular countries, the President will leave the door open to send arms to Latin America, if necessary, as well as to western Europe. This will be in line with one important passage of Defense Secretary Forrestal's annual report of last week.

"There is at the present time," Forrestal reported, "no adequate legislation under which the United States Government can provide military assistance to its allies or to countries with international interests similar to those of the United States.

"Legislation of this type should, of necessity, be general in nature and not limited to any single geographic area, as it is impossible to estimate just what part of the world will require military assist-

37 Are Dead And400Hurt In Arkansas Mill Town

Storm, Accompanied By Rain, Hail Starts Fires; Twister Also Rakes Louisiana

Warren, Ark., Jan. 3 (AP).—Tornadoes ranging in force from brief twisters to storms of catastrophic fury hedgehopped through Arkansas and Louisiana late today and tonight, causing casualties estimated in the hundreds.

Red Cross officials at Monticello, Ark., 18 miles east of here, reported 37 known dead and at least 400 injured at Warren alone.

The death toll in other storms that struck scattered areas in northwest Louisiana and southern Arkansas stood at 4. Scores were injured.

Fires broke out here after a tornado battered Warren for 15 minutes, starting at 5:45 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time). Power was gone, water lines were broken and telephone lines were down.

Doctors worked by torchlight in treating the injured.

Ambulances were rushing the overflow of injured from here to Monticello and Pine Bluff, 40 miles north of here.

(Warren is 90 miles south of Little Rock)

With Rain and Hail

The storm here was accompanied by heavy rain and hail. They helped quench the fires, but a fire in the Southern Lumber Co., yard still was burning at 10:30 p. m. (CST).

R. J. Rhinehart, Pine Bluff, an official for the Arkansas Power & Light Co., reported to his Little Rock office that the scene at Warren was the "worst I've ever seen." Rhinehart survived a tornado that killed some 30 persons near Pine Bluff in 1947. Another utility official, L. C. Stephens, Monticello, reported he saw seven bodies lying on the lawn of a Warren hospital.

Louisiana State police said two persons were killed near Haynesville, La., this afternoon. More than a score was injured. Shortly afterward, the same storm, apparently, swept north into Arkansas, and struck twice near El Dorado, killing two more persons and injuring about a score.

Gathering fury as it moved northeastwardly, the storm next blasted Warren. It struck Dark Corner, northeast of here, about an hour later. No storms have been reported since 7 p. m. (CST).

Other Damage

A number of other communities in the two southern States reported damaging windstorms.

The tentatively identified dead:

At Warren: Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Green, a Mrs. Hamilton, a Mr. Bradley and a Mrs. Harding.

Near El Dorado: Mr. and Mrs. Luther Owens.

Near Haynesville (north of Shreveport): Howard Dougdale, 55; Choudrant and T. J. Hicks, 10-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ardis Hicks, seven miles east of Haynesville.

Mrs. Gladys P. Edwards, Warren newspaperwoman, said "the first warning we had (of the storm) was a terrible noise." It thundered in from the southwest and moved northeastwardly, missing the business district, she said.

"We in the business district didn't know what had happened until it was over," she added.

G. G. King, municipal employe, said the storm cut a narrow path. "It tore down 30 or 40 houses and blew away in a store. I saw the smokestack at the Bradley Lumber Co., mill fall to the ground."

The center of the destruction was in "Milltown" in the Bradley Co. area. Many workers resided in small houses about the plant.

The Dixon Lumber Co., also was reported damaged.

Rhinehart said a number of

Hog Deluge Drops Prices At Chicago

Top Figure of $21 For Best Is Lowest Since Autumn of 1946

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP).—A heavy outpouring of hogs sent prices tumbling in the livestock market here today.

Receipts were the heaviest since June, 1944. The top price for best grade hogs was $21 a hundred pounds, lowest since October 14, 1946, when the OPA ceiling on hogs stood at $16.25.

Arrivals totaled 27,000 head. Last year's peak day was April 19, when 21,000 head arrived. The Chicago & North Western Railway reported it alone unloaded 120 railroad cars of livestock here today.

Prices dropped $1 to $1.50 a hundred pounds.

Agriculture Department sources said the livestock trade was surprised by the sudden outpouring of hogs. They said the trade thought it may have been tied in with tax considerations as money received from today's sales would not be computed on 1948 income tax returns.

All other livestock markets also reported heavy receipts. Arrivals at 12 leading markets today amounted to 163,000 head. On the first day of trading in 1948, which was Friday, January 2, total receipts were 101,900 head.

Today's best price of $21 compared with an all-time record here of $31.85, made August 19, 1948.

U. S. Warning Reported Sent Jewish State

Israel Is Reputedly Told Invasion Means Loss of Recognition

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—A responsible source said today the United States has told Israel she faces the loss of full American diplomatic recognition if Jewish troops invade neighboring Arab states.

The informant, who declined to be identified, said the surprise American move came after British officials warned that Britain might be drawn into the Middle East conflict as an active military ally of the Arab states.

A United States Embassy spokesman said he could not comment officially on the report. The State Department in Washington declined to give either confirmation or denial.

(An Israeli Foreign Office spokesman in Tel Aviv said the British government appears to be maneuvering its "sulky boycott" of Israel toward actual war. Winston Churchill coined the phrase "sulky boycott" when he demanded on December 10 that Britain accord recognition to the young Jewish state.

(The British Ambassador in Washington, Sir Oliver Franks, made and then canceled an appointment with President Truman today. There was no explanation from the White House for the envoy's action. No new appointment was made.)

The informant here gave this account of the American warning to Israel:

Franks met Friday with Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett. The British Ambassador asked that the United States Government use its influence with the Jews to get them to stay in their own territory.

Unless the Jews do so, Franks reportedly said, Britain may be compelled to go to the aid of her

Interest Rates On GI Loans To Stay at 4%

VA Decides Increase Would Not Improve Veterans' Housing

Interest rates on GI loans will be kept at 4 per cent for the present, Veterans' Administrator Carl R. Gray announced yesterday. He said he did not think a higher rate would help veterans get more homes.

The last Congress authorized Gray to increase the rate to 4½ per cent with the consent of Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder. But Gray said that after consultations with Government leaders, veterans and lending institutions, he had decided against making the increase now, although he would review the situation later "should economic conditions indicate the need for such a review."

". . . I have reached the conclusion that an increase in rates would not be in (veterans') best interests as the evidence fails to indicate that an increased rate will make more houses available to veterans," he stated.

He said about 23,000 veterans are obtaining home loans each month under the GI program.

GI loans are made by private banks and lending institutions. The Government insures 50 per cent of the amount of the loans, up to a maximum of $4000 for purchase of a home or farm, and up to $2000 for a purchase of a business. While the Government insures only part of the loan, it fixes the interest

New Home Rule Drive for D. C. Dealt Immediate Setback

McGrath Expected To Head Senate's District Committee

Appointment of Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) as chairman of the Senate District Committee appeared almost certain, last night.

This became apparent in spite of the announcement last night by Senator Alben Barkley, chairman of the Democratic steering committee, that his group reached "absolutely no final decisions" on committee assignments in their afternoon closed session.

McGrath ranks third in seniority on the District Committee. However, the ranking Democratic member, Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) is in line to assume the chairmanship of the Senate Civil Service Committee which he is expected to take.

Next in line for the District job is Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.). But he has told reporters that his main interest is membership on a second national committee.

Holland's only major committee now is public works. He feels that a chairmanship would preclude another committee assignment.

It is further understood that the Florida Senator is backing McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, for the District Committee.

Senator McGrath has repeatedly stated that he would gladly accept the District chairmanship.

McMillan Opposes Continuing Special House Subcommittee

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The new drive to win Washington home rule from the Democratic Eighty-first Congress yesterday suffered a setback only a few hours after a rewritten suffrage proposal went into the House hopper.

The dash of cold water to District suffrage proponents came from John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), prospective chairman of the House District Committee, who told The Washington Post last night that he "certainly did not favor" continuation of a special home rule subcommittee in the House.

McMillan was referring to the bill introduced at the opening session of the House by Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) which would replace the District's appointed commissioner government by an elected city council plan.

"I do not see any point whatever in setting up another home rule subcommittee within the District group," said McMillan, former District Committee chairman and a longtime opponent of extending voting rights to local residents.

"Anyone interested in the subject who wishes to refresh his memory on home rule problems, has only to reread past testimony," McMillan added.

Touching on another District sore point, McMillian said his primary concern was setting a fiscal affairs subcommittee to start work immediately on the city's financial dilemma.

"More revenue for the District must be found some place, I don't know just where," McMillian said.

He restated his support of a District sales tax as "the most painless levy" possible.

The original Auchincloss bill weathered a bitter floor fight in the House last Spring but failed to reach a final vote. It had previously been through lengthy hearings before joint home rule subcommittees created by resolutions of both the Senate and House.

The new Auchincloss plan is a simplified version of the legislation before the Eightieth Congress, but revised to eliminate many of the sources of opposition which cropped up last Spring. It would call for a referendum approval of home rule by District residents before a city government change could take place.

The Auchincloss bill was expected to be referred to the House District Committee.

Wife to 'Stick by' Husband Charged With Miscegenation

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 3.—Brown-eyed, winsome Florence Madalone Hamilton, 19, said tonight she is willing to wait for her husband "even if he has to serve time."

She said she loves him and he loves her—in fact he has told her so in three letters since he was jailed at Salem, Va., December 24 on a charge of violating Virginia's miscegenation law.

The husband is Clark Council Hamilton, a former Navy carpenter and civilian steelworker, who was charged by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ada L. Hammond, with breaking the law which prohibits intermarriage of races in Virginia.

"I didn't believe he was colored when my mother first told me," the quiet, titian-haired stenographer told a reporter tonight "And I still don't believe it."

Her mother has told reporters she took out the charges against Hamilton after a dream that he was a Negro.

The young wife said her mother had told her about the dream, but that the dream failed to convince her as had her mother's other pleas.

Even if her husband is convicted—the law calls for a one to five year sentence—Mrs. Hamilton will "stick by him" and wait until they can be together again, she said.

In a two-hour interview here, the youthful girl kept a restrained air, sipped a glass of milk and told a story of a tempestuous life with her own family after she married Hamilton on May 22.

She first met Hamilton, who gave his age as 22 when he

Segregation Ban at Airport Is Upheld by Federal Judge

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

A Civil Aeronautics Administration order banning racial segregation in Washington National Airport dining rooms was upheld yesterday in United States District Court at Alexandria as a valid Federal policy.

Attorneys for Air Terminal Services, Inc., which operates airport dining rooms and brought the court action, were not prepared to say immediately whether ATS would abide by or appeal the decision of Judge Albert V. Bryan. ATS had sought an injunction to prevent enforcement of the order.

Their decision will be influenced, they said, by action followed in three damage suits against ATS scheduled for hearing Thursday. Joseph C. Waddy, whose Washington law firm is representing plaintiffs in these cases, said he would know today whether the suits would be pressed or dropped.

Each of the three suits, all filed by Negroes before the CAA order was issued, sought damages for racial discrimination in dining rooms at the airport.

ATS personnel at the airport dining rooms early last evening said they had not received orders to stop the dining room segregation policy.

The central issue at yesterday's court hearing was whether the order issued December 27 by CAA Administrator D. W. Rentzel conflicted with Virginia's segregation law.

This question closely concerned itself with the Assimilative Crimes Act, which makes Federal reserva-

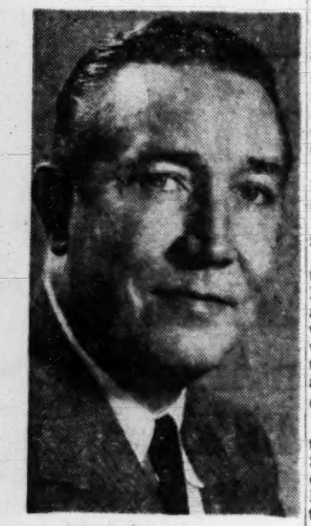
Frank Myers, Senate Democratic Whip, Backed New Deal in Its Leanest Days

It makes little difference to Senator Francis J. Myers, Pennsylvania Democrat, that speech is silver and silence golden. The new Democratic whip of the Senate has a talent for both.



SENATOR F. J. MYERS
Appointed Majority Whip

The tall, robust Philadelphian was elected to the House of Represetative some 10 years ago with the aid of his Irish baritone. Then he spent the next six years in virtual silence, tending to his constituents, and was elected to the Senate in 1945. Since, the voice of Frank Myers has been heard with increasing frequency and intensity on all major issues.

Looking back, the record of Frank Myers, in the House and Senate alike, stands for virtually 100 per cent New Dealism, in both foreign and domestic affairs.

During the past two years, when the GOP dominated Congress, and New Dealism was both unstylish and unpopular on Capitol Hill, it was the voice of the Philadelphian which again and again defended the New Deal and whiplashed back at its foes.

Opponents Like Him

Yet, there's quality possessed by the youthful-appearing, 48-year-old Senator which makes him friends even among his political opposites. Myers is liked on both sides of the Senate.

His unswerving faith in the New Deal and firm support for President Truman—he came out for Truman in '47—made Myers a natural selection to head he platform committee of the Democratic Party convention last summer.

Senator Myers, observers report, worked mightily to produce a platform which would both advance the New Deal and keep the conservative wing from deserting. He succeeded in great measure, despite the flare-up over an all-out civil rights program. Myers' appointment to Senate majority whip and the high councils of the party is both a reward for his efforts and a recognition of his ability.

During his four years in the Senate Frank Myers has fought for housing and rent control, a Fair Employment Practices Committee, increased social security and railroad retirement benefits. He backed the full employment bill, urged an increase in minmium wages from the present 40-cents-an-hour level, came out for anti-inflation legislation. On the foreign policy front he backed the Administration on Bretton Woods, United Nations Charter, Marshall Plan, reciprocal trade.

Fights Communism

Myers, a Catholic, was a leader in the move to win American recognition for the new state of Israel. A foe of communism, he has charged that the relegation of any group of Americans to "second-class citizenship" serves to invite communism into our country.

Flood control is a principal interest of the Pennsylvanian. He has harried both the White House and leading Republicans in battling against cuts in flood-control appropriations.

In the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, the ubiquitous Myers twice led the fight in blocking favorable action on the Rizley-Moore bill curtailing Federal Power Commission jurisdiction over national gas companies. He teamed up with Republican committee colleague, Senator Clyde Reed of Kansas, on railroad legislation.

Born in Philadelphia, son of a postal employe, Frank Myers worked as an extra in the post-office to help himself get through St. Joseph's College, later taught school to help himself through Temple Law School.

The Senate majority whip got into politics in 1934 as a volunteer speaker for George H. Earle, elected Governor. Two years later Myers spoke out in his own behalf, for Congress, but lost out in the primary. He succeeded in 1936. Then in 1941, he climbed into the Senate over Jim Davis, Republican stalwart and pre-Pearl Harbor isolationist.

Senator Myers lives at the Mayflower Hotel when Congress is in session, commutes weekends to Philadelphia, where he lives with his wife and three children.

Myers, the man who drafted the Democratic Party platform, has no doubts about what the Eighty-first Congress will do. It will enact into action the principles of that platform, he says.

1948 Deflated Democratic Bank Account

By The Associated Press

The Democratic National Committee reported yesterday that it wound up its victorious year of 1948 with less money than it had at the start.

A year-end financial statement filed with Congress showed $315,367 in the bank on January 1, 1948, and $180,914 on December 31 as the party renewed its White House lease and regained control of Congress.

Contributions came in slowly during the early part of the year, the committee reported. For instance, in the first two months it took in only $15,832.

The busiest check-cashing period was from September 1 to October 22, when the daily mails rolled in $647,581. The next best was $602,346, arriving between October 28 and the end of the year.

The committee said it had collected $1,886,746 during the year in contributions, gathered another $84,596 from other sources and spent $2,127,296.

Some of the large individual contributions made after the November 2 election included:

$2500—William M. Martin, jr., Washington.

$2000—Adolph Bugor, Washington.

$1000—William Alexander Julian and W. John Kenney, Washington.

Bonus Bill Is Proposed

Baltimore, Jan. 3 (AP).—A bill to provide a bonus for Maryland veterans from retail sales tax receipts will be introduced at the General Assembly session convening Wednesday in Annapolis, Senator Kimble (R., Allegany) said today.

The minority floor leader said that if no one else presents legislation to this end, he will introduce the bill.

Kimble, an opponent of the sales tax from its inception, said he would be willing to change his stand on the levy if the proceeds could be diverted to provide payment to Maryland war veterans.

"If this were done," he said, "every war veteran in the State could be given a $500 bonus, and the entire amount paid off in a few years.

"The fact that Maryland did not show her gratitude to the veterans of the First World War is no reason for continuing to be ungrateful."

Rayburn Takes Oath as Speaker of House

Harris & Ewing

GETS OLD JOB BACK—Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), dean of the House of Representatives, administers the oath to Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), as the Eighty-first Congress convened yesterday. Rayburn regained the job he lost two years ago when Republicans won control indicated that the opposition consisted only of the original group of Young Turks, who met a week ago to plan Taft's unseating.

Taft's victory was apparent at the morning session, when an effort was made to get a change in the rules that would have made him ineligible for reelection. This change would have limited service as chairman to four years, including past service. Taft has been chairman for four years already. It lost 29 to 13.

Provision of Rules

Under the new rules only the six members named by the conference chairman are limited to four years, and then cannot serve another 2-year term without a break of at least two years.

But the five ex-officio members may serve as long as they are chosen for their offices.

Millikin said he would submit his nominations for the six places on the Policy Committee to a meeting of the conference late this week.

All was not harmony and unity during the meeting. During the morning Senator Charles W. Tobey, New Hampshire, strode from the room declaring "democratic processes didn't do so well." Later Senator George D. Aiken of Vermont stalked out angrily declaring the "Old Guard is in complete control." Lodge reports the fight will go on "for new leadership within the Republican Party."

Millikin said there were some "fervent speeches" in the closed session. He said "Lodge spoke before the voting, and Taft afterwards."

Taft, he said, urged an "entirely progressive, forward-looking program on social and economic matters," but "without infringing on the liberties of the people."

The morning session dragged on until time for convening the Senate.

The first session of the new Senate was marked by the usual friendly election of president pro tempore and secretary of the Senate.

Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley, who remains as Senator from Kentucky until January 20, offered the resolution to notify President Truman that a quorum was present and ready to perform. As he arose, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), president pro-tem, in recognizing him, remarked:

Recess Until Wednesday

"As the result of the recent accident, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky will soon lose his right to stand and be recognized on this floor. He will soon lose his right to free speech within these walls. He will soon lose his right to vote. In fact, his civil liberties are disintegrating faster than at any time that I can recall."

The organization of the Senate took little more than an hour. As determined at the Democratic caucus last week, Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee was chosen, by a straight party vote, as president pro tem over Vandenberg, and Leslie Biffle of Arkansas was chosen Senate secretary.

The Senate then recessed until Wednesday.

Truman Attends Special Service And Communion

President Truman yesterday walked from Blair House to the National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., to attend an 8 a. m. service of prayer and communion.

The special service was held on occasion of the convening of the new Congress. Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court, Attorney General Tom C. Clark and a number of Congressmen also attended.

The pastor, the Rev. Edward L. R. Elson, offered a series of short prayers of intercession and led the congregation in the singing of two hymns, "Our God Our Help in Ages Past" and "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Opening Prayer Asks No 'Upsets'

Senators who heard the opening prayer of this session by their newly reelected chaplain, Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, didn't find it radical in any sense.

Sunday, Dr. Marshall told his congregation: "I think I'll start asking God to upset some political applecarts . . . and then I think I'll ask Him to help them pick up the apples and put the right apples into the right carts."

But yesterday's prayer was very sedate:

"O Lord our God, look with favor upon the members of the Senate, and bless each one of them according to his needs.

"May they be aware of a mandate higher than that of the ballot box, a mandate from Thee to legislate wisely and well.

"We believe that Thou wilt accept these men as representatives of the people, and art willing to work in them and through them that they may become instruments of Thy will. Grant that they be willing to have it so, through Jesus Christ our Lord, Who taught us to pray together."

Rules Committee Curbed by House

the new House. Democratic "bolters" dropped to a new low and Republican desertions hit a new high.

Democratic leaders said somewhat sanguinely that it was more significant than the rules change, that it could mean the coalition was "destroyed."

To tie down Democratic rebels, a Democratic caucus Saturday night dug back into antiquity and unearthed an old "binding caucus" party rule. Under its provisions, all Democrats attending a caucus are required to abide by decisions voted by two-thirds of the caucus. Only those who made contrary pledges during their campaigns are exempt.

Democrats, who haven't "bound" their members in caucus for years, now are expected to revive the "binding" process on every key measure, to complete the rout of the coalition.

This practice, plus yesterday's blow at Rules Committee powers, should greatly reduce the obstacles in the path of such measures as public housing, slum clearance, repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and substitution of a new law to replace it.

It may not greatly affect the outlook on civil rights measures which in recent years have swiftly passed the House, via the committee "discharge" route. Another road block, the Senate filibuster, is the chief barrier to these, and the Senate to date has made no move to change its rules.

Just before the House showdown, retiring Speaker Joseph W. Martin (R., Mass.) called a meeting of his GOP steering committee to consider the rules change.

They decided to oppose Sabbath's motion and get behind a substitute recommended by Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.).

Herter's substitute would have liberalized the present so-called "calendar Wednesday" procedure, whereby the roll of House committees is called once a week to permit committee chairmen to call up reported bills.

Aimed at Delaying Tactics

In recent years opponents of controversial bills have discovered how to filibuster bills to death on "calendar Wednesday" by making delaying motions and quorum calls. Herter's proposal would have required the Speaker to ignore all dilatory motions. It would have further required the committee roll to be called every Wednesday unless two-thirds of the House voted to skip it.

Herter and Representative Martin argued that the Democratic curb on the Rules Committee vests "extraordinary" power in two individuals, the Speaker and the committee chairman he recognized to call up blockaded legislation.

House Republican Whip Leslie C. Arends (Ill.) said the rules change made Rayburn a "czar" and "another Uncle Joe Cannon."

"They say Cannon carried the rules around in his pocket," said Arends. "Rayburn will carry the rules in his gavel."

Some neutral House parliamentary authorities, however, questioned how much "discretion" Rayburn will have under the rule. These said the rule is so written that Rayburn has no alternative but to recognize any chairman whose bill has been blocked for 21 days.

Rankin Seeks Recognition

"The only new power he will have is his personal influence with a chairman," said one authority on the rules.

At least one Southern Democrat was on his feet and demanding recognition when Rayburn ordered the roll call. He was Representative John J. Rankin (Miss.), who opposed any change in the rule.

Northern and Western Democratic liberals, who had hoped in the same rules change to curb the House Un-American Activities Committee, of which Rankin is a member, were sidetracked as well.

Representative Harry J. Davenport (D., Pa.), for example, had a resolution to "abolish" the Red-hunting group. Another had a motion aimed at Rankin's membership on the committee and others wanted to revamp its procedures.

Other Action Planned

Foes of the Un-American Activities group plan to take their case before the next Democratic caucus. One compromise move, said to be under leadership consideration, would set up a special committee to recommend a fair code of procedure for all House investigating committees.

When Rayburn announced "the ayes have" it on approval of the rules change, Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.), tried in vain to get another roll call. Some 20 members stood in support of the Cox request. Rayburn ruled it an "insufficient number" for a roll call.

Standing applause followed Rayburn's election as Speaker. With 416 of the total 434 members voting, the Speakership vote was: Rayburn, 255, and Martin, retiring Speaker, 160. Representative Vito Marcantonio, only American Labor Party member in the new House, voted present.

Rayburn thanked members for returning him to what he said was the highest office he had ever aspired to hold and then made an earnest plea for bipartisan cooperation on foreign policy and national security issues.

"On matters of great national interest," he said, "national defense, the preservation of our liberty and keeping the leadership of the world that has been thrust upon us in recent years, I feel certain there will be little division at the center aisle."

He said he was sure the House will not divide party-wise on "those great questions of whether we live and remain free, whether there is a world that is fit to live in."

Rayburn conceded, however, that the House "will divide" on domestic questions.

"The Democratic Party has been called on to solve them," he said. "We will miss our mark and fail in our duty if we do not live up to the expectation of the American people."

Rules Chairman Sabath then administered the Speaker's oath to Rayburn and Rayburn in turn swore in all House members in all of the top House offices formerly held by Republicans. Then, all opening formalities attended to, the Houses squared off for the rules fight.

The House was safely in Democratic hands when the President, accompanied by his Secret Service detail, strolled into the Capitol to pay Rayburn a "surprise" visit.

Rayburn received him in the first-floor office where former Vice President John Nance Garner once conducted his famous "Board of Education."

Others joining them there included Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley, House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.), Senate Secretary Leslie L. Biffle, Attorney General Tom Clark, Secretary of the Air Force Stuart Symington, Senator Lyndon Johnson (Tex.) and Representative Wright Patman (Tex.).

Asked if it was a "Cabinet meeting," Clark grinned: "No, a meeting of the board of education."

be held by one of the standing subcommittees established in the new Democratic organization of the House.

Suffrage backers expressed further discouragement in the fact that the chief opponents—Southern Democrats—who were able to prevent a final vote on the Auchincloss bill last year, have been re-elected. They were expected to remain on the District Committee.

On the Senate side, the year's opening wedge toward District voting privileges will be driven tomorrow with the introduction of the McCarran bill. Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), former Senate District Committee head, will file his proposal to create a Federal City Charter Commission. This 11-member commission of leading local residents would draft a home rule charter for later presentation to Congress.

but would not actively campaign for it, nor create any ill feeling amongst his colleagues over the selection.

The Rhode Island Senator has taken a special interest in Washington affairs since his election to the Senate two years ago. As a member of the District Committee, he succeeded in winning passage of daylight saving time here on a year-to-year basis, and fought for legislation to liberalize pensions for widows of deceased firemen and policemen. He is a strong proponent of District suffrage.

Roll Call in House Test

By The Associated Press

Following is the rollcall on a House test vote which yesterday assured victory for the Administration plan to curb the power of the House Rules Committee.

The vote was on a motion designed to shut off debate and prevent amendment to the resolution to change the committee's authority. The motion was passed 275 to 142. The House then went on to approve the resolution by a non-record, voice vote.

Sisters Sentenced To Year in Prison For Rent Gouging

New York, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Two middle-aged sisters were given a verbal scathing as "dollar worshipers" and sentenced to a year in prison today for demanding bonuses and charging exorbitant rents for tenements house apartments.

His voice bitter with scorn, Judge Nathan Perlman ordered Dorothy, 43, and Pearl Bloom, 41, to pay fines totaling $7500 and sentenced each to 12 months in the penitentiary.

"The victims of your extortion were the poor," Perlman said. "You worship the dollar and you will die by the dollar. Your form of philosophy and conduct has made more people dissatified with our form of economy than any spy in the United States could do."

Eccles for Profits Tax as 'Deflator'

Marriner S. Eccles, veteran member of the Federal Reserve Board, said yesterday there are signs inflation is "coming to an end."

He suggested that the Government should encourage some "desirable deflation" and proposed as one method a new 15 per cent Federal tax on undistributed corporation profits.

The Utah banker, who was chairman of the Reserve Board for 14 years until demoted to plain membership by President Truman last year, expressed his views in a copyrighted interview with U. S. News and World Report, a weekly news magazine.

Listing several signs that "some slack is developing" in the Nation's economy, Eccles said:

"I believe that some deflationary readjustment will soon occur which will help to correct the more serious maladjustments in prices and incomes. This would be all to the good."

He predicted that "a deflationary adjustment coming now would not be of long duration or too severe."

But he warned that any downtrend which may be setting in would be halted and inflationary pressures revived if the Government should begin spending more than it takes in.

He said the Federal budget (which President Truman will present to Congress next week) should provide for "a substantial cash surplus" which could be used to pay off part of the huge Federal debt.

Eccles suggested putting the postoffice on a pay-as-you-go basis, closing "loopholes" in the tax laws and "strengthening" tax collection machinery "so that all taxes due the Government will be collected."

"With respect to higher taxes, I would not favor increasing personal income taxes now," he said. "I would favor an excess profits tax in preference to an increase in the normal tax on corporate profits . . . but I would prefer a tax on those corporate earnings which are not paid out as dividends."

He pointed out that such a tax could be "justified on the grounds that the Government does not collect personal income taxes" on undistricted corporation profits, whereas it does collect a double tax on dividends.

Gen. MacArthur Took 1 Day Off During 1948

Tokyo, Jan. 3 (U.P.)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur took a day off during 1948, but made a New Year's resolution not to let it happen again.

Headquarters officials said their boss missed only one day at the office, including Sundays and holidays, during the entire year. On that day he took a "vacation"—a flying trip to Korea to participate in the inauguration of the new republic.

Capital Gains Tax Barred In Star Deals

By The Associated Press

The capital gains tax-saving bubble which caused so much excitement among radio's big money stars was deflated officially yesterday.

Commissioner George J. Schoeneman of the Internal Revenue Bureau served public notice that the stars will not be allowed to get by at the flat 25-per-cent capital gains tax rate on deals involving personal services.

Income tax rates, which range up to 77 per cent on sums above one million dollars, will be imposed where the facts show a "personal services" sale, he said. The bureau will look into the "realities" of each case.

The comparatively low capital gains rate applies, under the law, only to the sale of "capital assets," which means property.

The brief history of the capital gains craze as a tax-saving scheme was featured by these developments:

1. Its flare-up when the bureau ruled a few months ago that the capital gains rate applied to sale of the characters Amos 'n' Andy and their transfer from the NBC radio network to CBS. Being fictional characters, they were held to be property and therefore salable.

2. A weakening when negotiations for a similar network shift by Edgar Bergen and his dummies Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd reportedly were broken off a few weeks ago because the bureau wouldn't clear the deal as a property sale eligible for capital gains.

3. Then a slump following the report last Thursday that the bureau had ruled the $1,356,000 going to Comedian Jack Benny in another network shift was subject to the income tax rate as being a personal compensation deal rather than a property sale.

The bureau had silently been subjecting cases to tough testing, insisting that the circumstances show a property sale, at a price in line with the value of the property in question, before it would approve any transaction for the capital gains rate.

Schoeneman said in his statement:

"The tax effect of any business transaction is determined by its realities.

"Accordingly, proposals of radio artists and others to obtain compensation for personal services under the guise of sales of property cannot be regarded as coming within the capital gains provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

"Such compensation is taxable at ordinary income tax rates."

States Get 2 Weeks To Protest Oil Suits

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday granted Texas and Louisiana two weeks to file objections to a Government suit seeking to establish Federal jurisdiction over submerged oil lands off their coasts.

Attorney General Clark last month asked the court for permission to bring suits against the two States as original actions—that is, without trial in lower Federal courts. The Constitution gives the court original jurisdiction in cases involving States.

Clark also filed copies of the suits in which he asked the tribunal to declare primary Federal rights to "lands, minerals and other things underlying the Gulf of Mexico" adjacent to the Texas and Louisiana coasts.

The Supreme Court in June, 1947, ruled that the Federal Government "is possessed of paramount rights in, and full dominion and power over" submerged oil lands off the California coast. Clark's petition to the tribunal said the same rule is applicable equally to the gulf seabed and subsoil off the coasts of Texas and Louisiana.

In other actions today, the court:

Refused to reconsider its decision that it has no power over the international military tribunal at Tokyo which convicted 25 Japanese of war crimes.

Declined for a second time to review a lower court's decision that an employer must bargain with the union representing his workers before merit raises are given to individual employes.

Refused to review a case in which a group of General Motors and Ford workers unsuccessfully sought to challenge the validity of the 1947 portal-to-portal pay act.

The plea for reconsideration of the Supreme Court's decision in the Japanese cases was filed with the court December 22, about an hour before word was received from Tokyo that seven top Japanese warlords had been executed.

The executions were carried out two days after the court announced its decision that it had no power to intervene in any of the convictions.

The rehearing plea was filed by American lawyers for six of the Japanese. Among them was Gen. Kenji Doihara, one of those who went to the gallows. The Supreme Court announced its refusal of a rehearing in a brief order which said Justice Jackson had taken no part in the case.

In the merit raise case which the high court again refused to review, the United States Circuit Court in Cincinnati decided two to one in a case involving J. H. Allison and Co., Chattanooga meat packers, that the National Labor Relations Act requires bargaining on merit increases.

The Supreme Court last October 11 denied a company request that it review and overturn the Circuit Court decision. The denial had the effect of upholding the decision.

In the portal case which the Supreme Court refused to review, the employes sued in United States District Court in Detroit for overtime pay for "walking time" and other activities preliminary to actual work in automobile plants. The court dismissed their suit on the ground that the act barred the claims.

The United States Circuit Court in Cincinnati upheld the District Court.

The high court also:

Unanimously upheld an ICC order setting up a formula for railroad freight rates on coal shipments to points in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin. The order was issued in 1945 to apply to coal traffic moving from mines in Illinois, Indiana and western Kentucky. Justice Douglas delivered the decision.

Declared invalid a 1938 patent on a method of mass-producing small jewelry. Thoger C. Jungersen, a native of Denmark but now an American citizen, brought patent infringement suits against jewelry makers in New York and Philadelphia. The court decided against him 6 to 3. He had collected $120,000 in royalties.

Ruled that railroad safety laws apply equally to standing trains. It directed the Utah Supreme Court to reconsider a decision denying damages to the survivors of Frank Lucas. Lucas was killed when a flat car he was riding crashed into the rear of a stationary Southern Pacific freight train near Lemay, Utah. It was established that defective brakes stopped the freight train.

legislation which "injects itself not in the areas of conflict, but into an area of agreement," and infringes on workers' constitutional rights, they said.

Justice Black, however, said that since "at least as early as 1934" the high court after a long period of striking down State laws fixing minimum wages and terms of employment, has:

". . . consciously returned closer and closer to the earlier constitutional principle that States have power to legislate against what are found to be injurious practices in their internal commercial and business affairs, so long as their laws do not run afoul of some specific Federal constitutional prohibition, or of some valid Federal law."

The Arizona law differs from the others in that it does not prohibit discrimination against union workers, but only nonunion workers, Justice Black said in the majority opinion in that case.

But, he said, another Arizona statute invalidates contracts in which workers, as a condition of employment, agree not to join a labor union (socalled "yellow dog" contracts.)

Justice Ruttledge, in his concurring opinion, said that because no strikes were involved in the State laws at issue, there was no question at hand on the legality of union workers to strike for their right not to work with nonunion workers.

He said he believed the court's opinion does not "foreclose this question," which he termed "momentous," and an issue on which he would want a thorough reargument of the cases.

Frankfurter's Position

Justice Frankfurter, in his 16-page explanatory opinion, said regulation of trade unions is basically a question of legislation, for "even where the social undesirability of a law may be convincingly urged, invalidation of the law by a court debilitates popular democratic government."

He noted that voters of Maine, Massachusetts and New Mexico have recently rejected similar legislation.

(According to the Labor Department, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia have the "right to work laws," while Colorado, Kansas, New Hampshire and Wisconsin have other union regulatory laws.)

In an apparent reference to the recent national election, Justice Frankfurter said the court cannot shape but can only nullify or approve legislation before it, and he said, referring to the character "Mr. Dooley," created by humorist Peter Finley Dunne:

"Mr. Dooley's 'th' Supreme Court follows th' iliction returns' expressed the wit of cynicism, not the demand of principle," for "a court which yields to the popular will thereby licenses itself to practice despotism, for there can be no assurance that it will not on another occasion indulge its own will."

Segregation Ban Upheld

tions subject to State laws in matters where the Federal Government has failed to act.

Melvin H. Siegel, special assistant to the Attorney General, argued that the Federal Government had acted through Rentzel's order, and that this took precedence over the State law.

Judge Bryan agreed with Siegel.

"The fundamental purpose of the Assimilative Crimes Act," Judge Bryan said in a memorandum, "was to provide each Federal reservation a criminal code for its local government; it was intended 'to use local statutes to fill in gaps in the Federal Criminal Code.' It is not to be allowed to override other 'Federal policies as expressed by acts of Congress' or by valid administrative orders . . . and one of those 'Federal policies' has been the avoidance of race distinction in Federal matters. . . . The regulation of the administrator, who was authorized by statute to promulgate rules for the airport, is but an additional declaration and effectuation of that policy and therefore its issuance is not barred by the assimilative crimes statute."

Though he upheld the order and refused to issue an injunction, Judge Byran struck down one of the Government's main arguments—that the Virginia segregation law does not extend to restaurants.

Siegel had contended that since the word "restaurant" was not specifically stated in the act, it could not be inferred from it. He went on to cite a number of cases to support his argument.

Judge Bryan ruled, however, that "the court may assume the Virginia statute is applicable to restaurants. Certainly, it is sufficiently close to justify plaintiff (ATS) in believing it was affected by the scope of the statute."

Bryan also dropped United States Attorney George R. Humrickhouse as a defendent in the case on the ground that it was both unnecessary and illegal to include him. The Government dropped its claim that Rentzel, as head of a Government agency, could be sued only in the District, to remove any ground for ATS requesting a delay in the hearing.

ATS Attorney Frederick J. Ball argued that "we are neither for nor against the order" but concerned only with its validity.

He pictured ATS as riding on the horns of a dilemma. If it complied with the order, he said, ATS could be prosecuted by the Federal Government under the Assimilative Crimes Act for violating the State segregation law.

On the other hand, if ATS does not obey the order, Ball said, it can be prosecuted for violating a CAA order, and could break its contract. "We are in a legal no-man's land," Ball told the court.

He also argued that ATS was given less than 24 hours notice, instead of the customary 30 days, of the order's publication. And he argued from a letter written by then Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman to the Speaker of the House of Representatives August 1, 1947, that an Act of Congress was necessary to end segregation at the airport.

To the Harriman letter, Siegel replied: "It is safe to say that at no time were the decisions cited here studied by his advisers."

J. Lindsay Almond, attorney general of Virginia, attended the hearing, but declined comment.

obtained a marriage license in Roanoke County, while she was selling popcorn in a Roanoke theater in 1946 at the age of 16. She was attending high school in the mornings, she said.

He was stationed at Camp Peary at the time, she said, and "came back to see me every two weeks." He continued to visit their home in southeast Roanoke that often even after being transferred to Asbury Park, N. J., she said.

Hamilton then spent a year in Honolulu, she said, and returned to Roanoke for a visit on a 30-day leave. It was during that stay he gave her an engagement ring, and her family then "approved of it," she continued.

Returned to Honolulu

"He went back to Honolulu for about six monts," Mrs. Hamilton said, "and my mother insisted that I was his girl, and threatened to 'tell him everything' if I went out with other boys."

They didn't intend to be married until they were both 21 years old, she said.

Hamilton returned to the United States and was discharged from the service in California in 1947, she recalled. He visited her on his way home "to see his parents, who live in Alabama" and came back to Roanoke in March of 1948 Mrs. Hamilton stated.

"He came to take me to a movie on the Saturday before May 22," she said, "and my mother said she wanted to go along."

The girl said she told her mother they wanted to be alone and a scene ensued in which her mother "beat me," Mrs. Hamilton declared.

"Clark and I went to the movie alone, and it was then we decided to get married as soon as possible," she explained, adding "we had only $20."

They took a blood test the following Monday and went with her father on Saturday to the Roanoke County Courthouse to get a marriage license, she said. Her father consented to her marriage—she was then 19—because "he liked Clark," Mrs. Hamilton stated. Hamilton then listed his age as 22, his color as white.

They called a minister and were married that afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Riverdale Baptist Church with both of the girl's parents present she said.

Her mother wanted them to spend their wedding night at the Hammond home, the girl recalled, but they refused and stayed in a Roanoke hotel. The father said they could live with the Hammonds, provided the husband helped around the farm, Mrs. Hamilton declared.

They went to live there the next day, she recalled.

Her husband got a job within a week with a Roanoke bridge and steel company, she said.

About three weeks later, her husband and her mother had a disagreement about his payment of the couple's board, the girl said.

Hamilton said he was "going downtown to get change," and her mother said "for him to get a place to live while he was there," Mrs. Hamilton continued.

Moved to Apartment

The couple moved into an apartment on Jefferson st. in Roanoke. Her mother "came to see me every day and begged me to come home to mamma," Mrs. Hamilton said.

The Hamiltons moved to Baltimore in August. He took a job as a steelworker and she as a typist in a department store, she said.

That same week, Mrs. Hamilton telephoned her mother to advance her enough money to help pay for their room and board until they received their pay.

"You can starve," she quoted her mother as saying. Mrs. Hammond did agree, however, "to send me enough money to come home if I would get a divorce," the girl added.

Phone Talks With Mother

Mrs. Hamilton said she refused.

Her mother then began calling her frequently by 'phone at her office, the girl recalled. It was during one of these conversations that "she first told me Clark was colored, but I didn't believe it."

The girl said her mother told her she had gone to Alabama where Hamilton's family lives and, while there, had become convinced Ham-

"When I got home from work that night," she said, I asked my husband, "'Are you white?'"

He said "'Sure, I'm white, regardless of what your mother says,'" she added.

Mrs. Hammond came to Baltimore in late September, her daughter said, and 'stopped me on the street when I was going to work."

She said, "If I'd come home for a week, I could come back to Baltimore," Mrs. Hamilton said.

She telephoned her father and he said it would be all right, Mrs. Hamilton explained, so she consented to go "to avoid more trouble."

After the week was up, Mrs. Hamilton started to pack her clothes and leave Roanoke, she said. Her parents would not let her go, although she began packing "several times."

Another family "argument" took place, and in its course Mrs. Hamilton received a black eye, she said.

She and a "girl friend" who was at the Hammond home called the sheriff "several times" to come out to their house, Mrs. Hamilton said. He came and the squabble quieted down, whereupon the two girls left for Baltimore, Mrs. Hamilton said.

"My father told me to leave every bit of clothing he had paid anything for," she added, "and I did."

Mrs. Hamilton said her parents had urged her to get her marriage annulled. She refused, she said, and they promised to take action themselves.

"I said I wouldn't agree to it, no matter how much money they spent," Mrs. Hamilton added.

An annulment suit was filed last October by the girl's father in Roanoke County Circuit Court. It is still pending.

Mrs. Hamilton then said her husband was arrested here on December 23 on a warrant sworn out by her mother, dated November 6.

"I went to Roanoke that night to see about getting a lawyer," the girl said.

"I called Clark by telephone and he told me anything I did was all right," she said, referring to a conversation after he was put in jail.

"He said if I tried to help him, fine; if I let him alone and he had to serve time, that was all right."

She described him as a "good husband," who "doesn't drink, smoke or run around."

"If he has a newspaper and a book to read, he's satisfied," she said.

Mrs. Hamilton said she and her husband had hoped some day to move to California, where he has friends. They would eventually raise a "small family," she said—"not a large one, because we both come from large families."

The girl has four brothers and a sister. She said there are "about twelve" children in her husband's family, of which he is the third child.

The first three children in his family including himself were born in California, she said her husband told her.

His parents then moved to Ohio, where the fourth was born, and the others were born after they moved to Alabama, where the family lives now," she quoted him as saying.

Hamilton named his birthplace as Elsereda, Calif., on his marriage license application.

Mrs. Hamilton said she had met her husband's 17-year-old brother, whom she described as "lighter than Clark" and having "yellowish hair."

She expressed confidence tonight that she and her husband eventually would be reunited.

"The main thing I'm worried about, if he has to serve time, is that he might change by associating with men in jail," she said.

"If that happens, I want him to know I helped as much as I could and maybe he will be all right again."

Cannon Asks Single Defense Funds Unit

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), new chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said yesterday he will ask the group to merge its two subcommittees handling defense appropriations.

Consolidation of the two subcommittees will mean that Congress will receive one huge military money bill each year and thus be able to better coordinate Army, Navy and Air Force spending, Cannon said.

The veteran legislator indicated that he already had discussed the proposal with other members of the Appropriations Committee. Approval is expected.

Three in Line

Representatives John H. Kerr of North Carolina, George H. Mahon of Texas and Harry R. Sheppard of California are in line for the chairmanship of the proposed new defense appropriations subcommittee.

Kerr was the ranking Democrat on last year's Army-Air Force subcommittee, but may become chairman of the deficiencies subcommittee instead. Sheppard was the senior Democratic member and former chairman of the Navy subcommittee, but he is outranked on the full Appropriations Committee by Mahon.

Meanwhile, Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), who will head the House Armed Services Committee, presented Congress legislation to:

1. Bar the Navy from laying down any more 65,000-ton "super" aircraft carriers without specific approval from Congress.

2. Revive the special income tax exemption allowed members of the armed services and continue it until next June 30. A new military pay bill will be sent to Congress this session, and Defense Secretary James Forrestal has asked that the tax exemption be extended temporarily. Termination of the exemption, effective last Friday midnight, in effect, gives servicemen a pay cut.

Authorization Acts

3. Give the Army and Air Force basic authorization acts comparable to that passed for the Navy just after the end of the war.

Under the proposals, the Army would be allowed 12 divisions, plus five separate regimental combat teams and a total authorized strength of 837,000 men. Army chiefs could ask money for new equipment for up to six divisions annually.

Air Force authorized strength would be set at 70 groups composed of 24,000 planes or 225,000 airframe tons. The manpower limit would be 502,000 officers and men, and money for up to 5200 planes could be asked each year.

4. Make goods sold at post exchanges and ships service stores subject to luxury taxes.

Vinson said he favors voting the money necessary to carry forward the five-year program started last year to give the Nation a modern 70-group Air Force. He said he'd fight for the required funds if not included in President Truman's budget.

"We need an Army, Navy and Air Force that will work as a team," said Vinson. "But the Army and Navy need not be as ready as our new first line of defense. We've got to spend the money to get our Air Force prepared to keep our only possible enemy from our shores."

Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), new chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told The Washington Post that he would call the group together next week to go over the legislative program. Probably, general hearings on the world situation and the condition of our defense forces will be held, he added.

Neither Vinson nor Tydings showed any haste about revamping the oft-criticized Unification Act. Vinson said his committee will wait for Secretary Forrestal's recommendations, while Tydings declared that some "minor" alterations in the act probably would be necessary.

Ambassador Scoffs at Idea Of Cleavage in Politburo

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Gen. W. Bedell Smith, United States Ambassador to Russia, said yesterday that he imagined there were Russians who favored a more "conciliatory line" toward this country.

He confessed, however, that it would be difficult for him to say who they were.

The soldier-diplomat scoffed at reports of a "cleavage" in the Politburo, 14-man group that controls the destiny of the Soviet Union. He said that, while there might be difference in viewpoint before policies are adopted, there was no cleavage in the sense of a clash between two factions.

General Smith talked to reporters in the White House lobby. He had just called on President Truman to talk about his resignation as American envoy to Moscow. His status, it appeared, remained unsettled after the interview.

Asked if Mr. Truman had accepted his resignation, General Smith said that he had not, as yet.

"He said he would talk to me later," Smith said.

The envoy, who was Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's chief of staff in Africa and Europe, pointed out that he had been away from home now for seven years and was getting "awfully homesick."

A reporter asked if he would insist on resigning.

"The President simply hasn't acted," Smith replied, "and I don't insist on anything, son . . . I'm a career soldier; the President is the Commander-in-Chief and I do what the Commander-in-Chief tells me to do. If he tells me to go back to Moscow, I will go just as I would obey any order."

General Smith, who was named Ambassador early in 1946, was asked about reports of a cleavage in Russia's Politburo. He said there had been a lot of misunderstanding about this.

"There is never cleavage in the Politburo," he said. "There are certain differences of opinion before policies are formally adopted, but a cleavage in the sense of a slash of opinion between two groups is outside the scope of my imagination."

General Smith was asked about President Truman's statement, in Kansas City, that "certain Russian leaders" were extremely anxious to come to an understanding with the United States.

"I can hardly comment on that," he said. "I imagine that in the Soviet Union, as in the United States, there are people sympathetic to a more conciliatory line rather than the harshness we have so far encountered.

"But it is difficult for me to say who follows a particular line of thought. Needless to say, my acquaintance with members of the Politburo is extremely limited."

General Smith, on his arrival at the White House, carried a handbag made in Paris—a present for Miss Margaret Truman. He told reporters he was trying to make up for her kindness in making him gifts of candy.

Bill to Repeal Tax On Oleo Introduced

Representative Poage (D., Tex.) introduced yesterday a bill to repeal Federal taxes on margarine.

The bill would remove the present tax of 10 cents a pound on colored maragine and also the one-fourth cent a pound tax on unclolored margarine, the $600 a year tax on manufacturers of both colored and uncolored, the $480 tax on wholesalers of colored margarine, $[illegible]00 on wholesalers of uncolored, $48 on retailers of colored and the $6 a year tax on retailers of uncolored margarine.

Shots Fired Near Probers

San Jose, Costa Rica, Jan. 3 (U.P.). Col. T. A. Sapia-Bosch of the United States and other members of the international "watchdog" commission were fired on by unidentified persons yesterday in the invasion area of northwestern Costa Rica, it was reported here today.

Unconfirmed reports said that Sapia-Bosch and other members of the military mission sent here by the Organization of American States were returning to El Amo airport after an inspection tour in the La Cruz area when several volleys of shots were fired near them.

So far as could be determined, no one was injured but details were lacking.

La Cruz, three miles south of thte Nicaraguan border, was the principal town seized in the fighting which began last month. Costa Rican forces captured it

Edgar Cardona, Costa Rica's chief of staff, said today that La Cruz was attacked again about 1 a. m. today, but that the attackers were driven off. He said reports indicated the attackers came from across the Nicaraguan border.

Truman to Ask Authorization For Sending Arms Aid Abroad

ance from the United States Government."

The President's message will be his signal to Congress that he intends to seek such "adequate legislation" as early as possible in the present session.

Detailed requests probably will be made after the coming North Atlantic defense treaty is ratified, although the military help will not necessarily be limited to the countries that are parties to the treaty.

The Administration's present plans call for submitting the requests to the foreign policy committees of the two houses of Congress rather than to the armed services committees.

Committee Works Out Details

Last week the State Department was made responsible, with White House approval, for preparing such requests, coordinating them with the other departments concerned, and sponsoring them before congressional committees. The same course was followed last year in the case of the European Recovery Program.

This year the program of military assistance is being worked out by a committee of three, consisting of Ernest A. Gross of the State Department, Maj. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer for the National Military Establishment, and Alex Henderson, general counsel of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Gross is chairman of the committee, with a title of "Coordinator for Foreign Assistance Programs" bestowed on him by a State Department order. The title does not mean, however, that he or the State Department are trying to "coordinate" economic aid to Europe or China, which has been and still is ECA's job.

Limited to Military

Henry R. Labouisse, jr., of the Undersecretary's office, continues as the State Department's chief liaison officer with ECA's work of economic recovery. The new coordination work is limited to the military field and to the inevitable problems which military aid to Europe will raise elsewhere in the Government.

For example, military men will have to decide which weapons will be most useful to European or other countries, and which can be spared from American defense needs. General Lemnitzer will be needed, therefore, to work out the military details, and presumably officers of the armed service will have to help in presenting the case to Congress.

The general, who is deputy commandant of the National War College, is familiar with the problems of European defense. He served last summer and fall as American observer on the military committee that studied the joint defense problems of the five so-called Western Union countries—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Since military assistance may not be limited to weapons, the help of ECA will be needed in getting a program ready for Congress. To take one example, cotton may be sent to western Europe for uniforms; cotton is already being financed by ECA for European economic recovery.

ECA May Help

In the case of certain commodities, ECA may be used as a purchasing and administering agent under the military aid program, just as the Export-Import Bank was made ECA's agent in administering European recovery loans.

Other departments may be called later into the work of preparing the military assistance requests for Congress. If it should be decided to make loans for certain types of armaments, and for certain countries, and free grants for others, the question would involve the National Advisory Council which has the ultimate decision on all Government loans to foreign countries; and this, in turn, would bring the Treasury Department into the present planning work.

Similarly the export of finished weapons or their ingredients would involve export licenses, which are the province of the Department of Commerce. So there is every prospect that the present three-man group working on military aid will swell into a larger body before many weeks have passed.

At a later stage the foreign countries themselves probably will have to set up machinery for settling intricate economic problems raised by military aid.

Independent of Treaty Work

Suppose, for example, that the Marshall Plan countries of Europe will be expected to sell, lend or give armaments to one another in conjunction with military aid from the United States. This might mean changes in the intra-European payments program just completed, with infinite labor, by the Marshall Plan countries.

The present work of planning the military aid program is going on independently of the diplomatic work of writing a North Atlantic defense treaty. This work is being carried on personally by Acting Secretary Lovett and the Ambassadors of the five European countries and Canada.

But there is a close relationship between the two activities, partly because the Atlantic treaty may become a kind of legislative charter under which the military aid will be requested. The three-man committee working on military aid is being kept informed, therefore, of every development in the still-secret work of hammering out a treaty for submission to the Senate.

West Asks Russia For Data on POWs

Germans Angry

Reds Break Vow to Free POWs by '49

Berlin, Jan. 3 (NYHT).—An angry political storm came to a climax this weekend in Germany as a result of the failure of Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov to pursue his pledge to return German prisoners of war by January 1, 1949. German leaders and Western intelligence sources suspect that many captured Germans—especially industrial workers—are doomed to stay permanently in the Soviet Union.

The Russians admit they have fallen behind the promised time schedule. They give "technical difficulties" as their excuse for the delay.

Interrogations of prisoners of war returned from Russia during the last year show that despite rumors in the western European press, there is no German army as such presently established on the Russian soil. But there is plenty of evidence that German officers are being incorporated into the Russian army as advisers, technicians and even as teachers.

It is fairly well established also that a considerable number of captured Germans with technical backgrounds have been recruited into industrial and armament plants in the Soviet Union located beyond the Urals. These workers are offered Soviet citizenship and the chance to marry Soviet women.

So far, the only POW's with experience in Russian industries who have been fortunate enough to return to Germany are those who suffered industrial accidents severe enough to land them in hospitals. Evidence indicates the Russians are opposed to the return to Germany of those who have had a glimpse of the Soviet Union's industrial heartland.

The United States, Britain and France called on the Soviet government yesterday to show whether it had kept its promise to return all German prisoners of war by last Friday, the last day of 1948.

Notes from the three governments, asking for information, were delivered in Moscow. The texts were not made public, but a State Department announcement contained the clear implication that the Russians had broken their promise and were being asked why.

At the Moscow conference of Foreign Ministers in March, 1947, Russia agreed with the other three powers to complete repatriation of German prisoners by the end of 1948. At that time, Foreign Minister Molotov reported Russia still held 890,532 German prisoners, although the Western powers supposed the total to be much greater.

German calculations place the number in Soviet hands in 1947 at 2,427,000, instead of Molotov's figure of 890,000, but the German figure probably includes hundreds of thousands who died in the great retreat from Stalingrad all the way to Berlin. The most conservative figure accepted by western Allied military authorities in Germany is that 200,000 are still in Soviet hands, in spite of the hundreds of thousands repatriated since 1947.

From March 1 to the end of November of last year, almost 195,000 were retturned to the western zones of Germany. Another 190,000 were estimated to have returned to the Soviet zone within the same period.

Thousands of those returning to the western zones from Russia have been physical or mental wrecks. In the British zone last September, 1225 out of a returning trainload of 2700 had to be sent to hospitals. In October, 1628 out of a returning group of 4375 were hospital cases, suffering from malnutrition, heart trouble, circulatory diseases and possible tuberculosis caused by underfeeding and exposure.

The United States sent its last German prisoner home on June 30, 1947; the British and French have officially announced that they, too, had kept their promise, although an estimated 100,000 German former prisoners are still working in France on a voluntary basis, earning a living in mines and factories and on the farms.

But the Russians have not furnished information about their side of the bargain, the State Department said last night, and therefore a new note was needed.

"The United States Government asked for specific information concerning the Soviet government's performance during the past 10 months," the State Department explained, "and its intention with respect to the future repatriation of war prisoners, including the number still to be repatriated.

"The United States Government renewed its earlier request for information concerning war prisoners who have died while in the Soviet Union."

How many have died, and how many are still behind Russian barbed wire, is still an anxious question in Germany. Every railroad station in Germany and Austria has its photographs of missing husbands, fathers, brothers or sons last heard from on the Russian front.

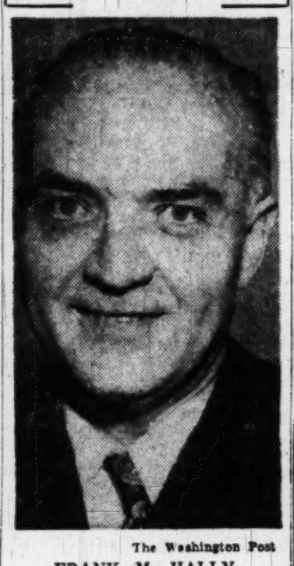
Frank Hally Made Deputy D. C. Auditor



The Washington Post
FRANK M. HALLY
Deputy D. C. Auditor

Frank M. Hally, senior investigator for the Federal Accounting Office, was yesterday appointed to the newly created post of deputy District auditor to aid in the establistment of a new auditing system for the District.

Hally was named by the District Commissioners on the recommendation of Auditor A. R. Pilkerton. The appointee will be authorized to approve vouchers, payrolls and other evidence of expenditures of public funds and to act as the auditor in the absence or disability of auditor.

A native of New York, Hally was graduated from the Pace Institute of Accountancy, New York City, and Southeastern University in Washington. He worked with two banks before joining the Interior and Treasury departments here.

Hally is married and lives at 3915 S st. se. As deputy auditor he will receive $7102 a year.

Establishment of a new auditing system was recommended by the Comptroller General in 1944 and the 1949 Appropriation Act set aside funds for seven positions necessary to effect the reorganization. Pilkerton said Hally will report for work Monday and immediately start on the project.

Two Ministers Of Norway Air Views

Oslo, Norway, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Defense Minister Jens Hauge intimated strongly today that he would like to see Norway join a western alliance aimed against Communist encroachment.

Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange indicated at the same time, however, that Norway must first build up cooperation with other Scandinavian countries and also must maintain good relations with Russia.

Both ministers gave their views in New Year messages published today in the newspaper Arbeiderbladet, organ of the Labor government.

Hauge said that the cheapest and most effective way for Norway to seek security is through a "comprehensive security system that also comprises countries with bigger resources that we have."

Questions of security, Hauge said, cannot be confined to the economic field alone.

Lange said that Norway "wants to build up cooperation with Denmark, Sweden and Iceland in all fields and in certain fields with Finland." He emphasized also that "good neighbor" relations with Russia would continue.

However, Lange did say that the more Norway works on the problems of Scandinavian cooperation "the more we discover that if we are to utilize fully modern techniques and possibilities we must find way to extend cooperation to kindred peoples outside of the Scandinavian borders."

'Overwhelming Majority' Released, Tass Claims

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—The Soviet news agency, Tass, said tonight an "overwhelming majority" of German prisoners of war had been repatriated from the Soviet Union.

"The repatriation of the remainder is proceeding according to the plan adopted by the Soviet government and is to be completed during 1949," said a Tass dispatch broadcast from Moscow.

Tass said allegations abroad that the Soviet Union is not living up to the four-power agreement for the release of all prisoners were "lies and slanders."

Fraternizing With Russians Banned for Yanks in Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Col. Frank L. Howley, United States military commandant, today angrily told all American personnel in Berlin including civilians, to stop fraternizing with Russians.

Americans and Britons, he said, are dying in flying supplies to the 2,500,000 Germans whom the Russians are trying to starve by their economic blockade.

"None of my men are going to play footsie-wootsie with the Russians under such conditions as their intolerable blockade," he said.

Howley was angered by two things. First, he got a letter from the widow of an American who died in the airlift. She said she had just had a baby whom her husband would have lived to see had it not been for the blockade. Secondly, Howley learned that an American official had wished a minor Russian official "all the best" for the new year and had invited him to dinner.

"As long as the Russians keep up this inhuman blockade around Berlin, while American and British fliers are dying . . . to keep the airlift flying, and as long as the American people are forced to spend millions of dollars to overcome this bestial blockade, then I do not want my men to be mixing socially with them," Howley said.

"Let them eat their own food. They can damn well eat their own shank bones of German cattle."

ABC Gross Reaches Record 44 Million

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—The American Broadcasting Co. reported today its gross billings from the sale of radio time reached a new peak of $44,301,754 in 1948. The network's previous high was $43,548,057 in 1947. ABC added that it had 272 affiliated stations at the close of 1948.

Reds Launch German Zone '2-Year Plan'

Berlin, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Hundreds of factories in the Russian zone sounded their sirens today to signal the start of a two-year plan for "economic recovery." Long before dawn, dispatches said, sirens started shrieking.

Workers were massed at their factories while Communist labor leaders exhorted them to make the plan work. The speakers called it "an economic plan for peaceful reconstruction."

The two-year plan calls for production increases of up to 81 per cent as compared with 1936, a 30 per cent decrease in production costs and wage increase of 12 to 15 per cent.

It also calls for sufficient food production to give Germans 2000 calories a day. At present it is indicated, Germans under Russian rules get about 1500 calories.

In Frankfurt, British military authorities asked a special guard of 5000 armed German policemen to stop smuggling of scarce goods from the British zone to the Soviet zone by Communists.

The British plan must be approved by the United States under the cooperative agreements.

It is known that the Russians have been hard hit by the counter-blockade which the Western Allies started in retaliation for the Russian blockade of Berlin. The Russians notably feel the lack of materials from the industrial Ruhr, in the British zone, hence smuggling is conducted largely from the British area.

In Frankfurt, a high German official predicted that German leaders of the American, British and French zones would make a formal protest to occupation authorities within the next week against the proposed international control of the Ruhr.

Marines Not Ready To Quit Tsingtao powerful municipal body in China, directed its radio appeal to Yenan, the Communist capital in Shensi Province.

Separate messages to other city and provincial councils urged that they indorse the Shanghai appeal, saying the next few days were crucial and the chance for peace might vanish.

The message was signed by Pan Kung-chan, a council leader, and other councilmen. (K. C. Wu, mayor of Shanghai, was not mentioned in this dispatch. He is on the Communists' blacklist of "war criminals.")

Those attending the dinner party given by Gen. Chang Chih-chung included Shao Li-tze, former Ambassador to Moscow and head of the former People's Political Council; Gen. Teng Wen-yi, government military spokesman, and Shen Chang-huan, government information minister and spokesman.

The north China provincial council of five northern provinces and the cities of Peiping and Tientsin voted last night to send a message to the Communists urging the war be compromised.

It voted to send another message to Chiang Kai-shek indorsing his new year's statement for peace.

State Department Here 'Surprised' at Action

By The Associated Press

State Department officials expressed surprise last night at the announcement of the withdrawal of United States Marines from China.

The announcement, made by the Marines at Tsingtao, said the withdrawal was ordered "since the Chinese government has decided to negotiate for a peace settlement with the Reds."

Officials here said no previous information had been received to support definitely the idea that the Nationalist government was talking with the Communists.

The development was not entirely unexpected, however. Rear Admiral Oscar Badger, commander of the Marines, has had authority from the Navy for weeks to abandon the Tsingtao base at any time he considered there was danger the American forces might become involved in the Chinese fighting.

The Marines were dispatched to China as part of a postwar agreement to provide the Chinese with training in the operation of naval craft furnished by the United States.

Since the Communists swept southward to the Yangtze, the naval command has had the additional responsibility of taking charge of the evacuation of Americans from the port city of Shanghai.

Officials here have stressed that the Marines would not take sides in the Chinese civil war.

While continuing to deal with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek as the leader of China, the State Department has adopted a policy of neutrality toward any peace negotiations.

Madame Chiang has been in this country appealing, so far futilely, for stepped-up aid to her husband's government.

Privately some officials have expressed doubt that such aid would have any effect in stemming the Communists.

President Truman has indicated he is in no hurry to decide the China aid question.

There was no immediate comment from the White House on the Tsingtao announcement.

Gateway Citizens' Group Requests Signal Light

The National Gateway Citizens Association last night directed a letter to George E. Keneipp, District director of vehicles and traffic, asking a traffic signal light at Bladensburg rd. and Eastern ave. ne.

The group met at Avalon Heights Church of Christ, 28th and Douglas sts. ne. In other action, it voted to back Mrs. E. M. Nelson for appointment to the District Board of Education.

Tells How to Secure A Mastery of English Quickly

An interesting new booklet offered free to men and women who want to secure a real mastery of the English language tells of a "fool-proof" method for studying English usage without attending classes. The plan, as described in this little book, has been worked out by Grenville Kleiser, who has helped thousands of students to a better command of English.

According to the publishers, this world authority uses no involved rules of grammar or rhetoric, but presents a simple, straightforward inspiring method that secures real results in very short time. Thousands of users of this method, they say, have gained increased power to express themselves in fluent, convincing, clear-cut English and so have improved their possibilities of social and business advantages.

To acquaint more men and women with the advantages of improving their understanding of English, the publishers, Funk and Wagnalls Company, have printed full details of this speedy, pleasant method in a booklet which they will send to anyone who requests it. The address is Funk & Wagnalls Company, Dept. WP-14, 153 East 24th Street, New York 10, New York. A penny postcard will do. There is no charge for the booklet.

Indonesian Guerillas Still Battle Dutch

Batavia, Java, Jan. 3 (AP).—Indonesian Republican guerillas were said today to have launched a series of harassing attacks against the Dutch in east Java areas adjacent to Batavia.

The underground Republican radio said raids of this type are increasing. The broadcast referred particularly to operations against Dutch military convoys.

The Dutch themselves reported a guerilla attack on a rubber plantation near Buitenzorg, 22 miles south of Batavia. According to the Dutch account, 500 Republicans launched the raid but were thrown back by five Europeans and 11 Indonesians.

Rail City Attacked

The Republican broadcast told of a guerilla strike on the rail city of Soekaboemi, 21 miles southeast of Buitenzorg. Other Republican units were said to have struck at Garoet, 50 miles southwest of Cheribon, and the Bantam Harbor area in extreme eastern Java. Attacks also were reported on the east Java towns of Ponorgo, Sukohardjo and Wonogiri.

Operations against Dutch military convoys, the Republican radio said, were conducted west of Cheribon and in the Soerakarta area of central Java. In the latter region a highway bridge was blown up by guerillas while seven Dutch army trucks were crossing it. Two Dutch planes were shot down in central Sumatra, the broadcast said.

Guerilla raids have been expected by the Dutch. Lieut. Gen. Simon Spoor, the Netherlands commander, has issued an order of the day which the Dutch refer to as a cease fire order on Java. The order authorizes Dutch soldiers to continue "operations against roaming groups or individuals trying to cause disorders."

Letter Sent to U. N.

Following the issuance of the order, Netherlands government representatives sent a letter to the United Nations Good Offices Committee and the consular truce commission saying a cease fire had been issued for late yesterday.

The Dutch informed the Good Offices Committee that 46 U. N. military observers will be permitted to observe at first hand conditions in former Republican territory now occupied by Netherlands troops.

British Bombs Used, U. N. Observers Say

Tel Aviv, Israel, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—United Nations observers said today that the enemy bombs which tore into the Jewish parts of Jerusalem during one of two air raids last Sunday were made in Britain.

The reports referred only to the first 35-minute strike, in which unofficial accounts said seven were killed. The observers did not mention the second bombing at 11 p. m.

Jews, Iraquis Battle on Central Front

Tel Aviv, Israel, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—A military spokesman said today fighting broke out on the central front, northwest of Nathanya, where Iraqis and Jews battled for two hours. He said two Jews and "several" Iraqis were killed.

In Tel Aviv, Prime Minister David Ben Gurion told several hundred foreign recruits that "the war is not over and the last battle still has to be fought." Peace is impossible, he said, until the Arabs come to an agreement with the Jews, presumably on Jewish terms.

Egyptians Accept Cease-Fire Order

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—The government today announced its acceptance of the United Nations Security Council cease-fire order for Palestine, but, at the same time, reported that its planes had attacked and scattered Israeli units near Faluja.

[The New York Herald Tribune correspondent at Tel Aviv reported that the Jewish state of Israel had delayed its acceptance of the order—Editor's Note.]

Foreign Minister Ibrihim Dessouki Abazah Pasha cabled the U. N. that Egypt will abide by the December 29 order which called on Arabs and Jews to cease fighting in southern Palestine's Negev Desert.

He also drew attention to Israel refusal, so far, to withdraw to the truce lines set in October, which would bar Jewish forces from the Negev area.

Shortly after the government announced its adherence to the U. N. order, the war ministry reported its air force assault against Israeli troops near Egypt's Negev base at Faluja, where an estimated 2000 soldiers are encircled by the Jews.

The communique added that small arms fire continued along the Negev front. Military sources asserted the Egyptians are holding their lines and inflicting heavy casualties on the Jews.

U. S. Warning Is Reported

Arab friends as an active military ally.

United States officials reacted swiftly, sending a message to the Tel Aviv government which sharply reprimanded the Jews for crossing into the territory of their neighbors. The Jews last week officially denied ever having done so.

The Israeli government formally replied today to the State Department's warning, the informant said. He was unable to give any idea what Israeli officials said.

Britain reportedly has been alarmed at the appearance of Israeli forces at points on or near the Palestine-Egyptian frontier, 120 miles away from the strategic Suez Canal. The informant said Britain could not tolerate the presence of "any invading force" near the canal.

Britain is bound by treaties to Egypt and Trans-Jordan and also has commitments with Iraq. These treaties provide for mutual aid in the event of attack.

The British are said to feel that if these treaties are invoked Britain must act, even though the Foreign Office has explained that it places commitments to the United Nations above those to treaty partners.

[The Anglo-Egyptian treaty of 1936 was a 20-year defensive alliance which permitted the British to station troops on Egyptian soil along the Suez Canal. In 1946 the Egyptians, wanting to get rid of British troops, asked for revision of the treaty.

[A revision was negotiated and initialled by the then Premier of Egypt, Sidky Pasha, but Sidky's government promptly fell and the revision did not become effective. The British regard the old treaty as continuing in full force.—Editor's note.]

The United States was the first country to recognize Israel de facto. The United States has had more influence with Israel than most other countries and this is why the British felt a warning from the Americans would help remind the Jewish state of "its responsibilities," the informant said.

11 Yale Men, Plane Crew Die in Crash

Seattle, Jan. 3 (AP).—Fourteen persons, 11 of them Yale University students returning to New Haven after the holidays, died in the crash and fire of a chartered transport plane at Boeing Field here last night. The other three were the crew of the DC-3.

The plane carried 27 students and 16 of them escaped.

A dozen students were pulled to safety from the flaming wreck by mechanics and airline employes at the field. The other apparently got out unaided.

Witnesses said the field was icy, with a light fog hanging over it at the time of the 10 p. m. takeoff.

R. D. Bedinger, regional administrator of the CAA, said the pilot, William Chavers of Seattle, was warned twice by the control tower that conditions were "below minimums" required for takeoff.

Officials Disagree

Officials of the Air Charter Service, which operated the plane, said they disagreed with Bedinger's conclusions after reading a transcript of the conversations between the plane's officers and the control

James R. Cluck, member of the law firm representing Seattle Air Charter, said a CAA summary of the conversation between the control tower and pilot discloses the plane "was cleared for takeoff."

"It also shows," the attorney said, "that the pilot was anxious to comply with instructions."

Sweethearts, friends and relatives, who had just said goodby to the New Haven-bound students, watched in anguish as the DC-3 went up in flames.

Witnesses said the plane had hardly risen from the ground when a wing dipped and touched the concrete runway. Then the ship fell the other way, dragged its left wing, sped into a Boeing Airplane Co. experimental hanger at 80 to 100 miles an hour and burst into flames.

Survivors started breaking through the cabin door which had burst open with the crash. Some made their way through windows or squeezed through a break in the fuselage.

Football Star Survives

John Roderick, Seattle, star end of Yale's 1947 football team, was one of the survivors. He was able to leave the scene without help.

The dead:

William F. Leland, Seattle, owner of the plane, doing business as Seattle Air Charter; William Chavers, Seattle, pilot; Kenneth Love, Seattle, copilot; Noel Brown, Seattle; Wallace Hartley, Mercer Island, Wash.; David Bruce Haerle, Portland, Oreg.; H. C. Franzheim, Seattle; Roger Young, Seattle.

James Bryan, Portland, Oreg.; Leonard B. Wickman, Bellevue, Wash.; Ralph D. Laird, Camas, Wash.; Don Lee Garrett, Portland; Russell H. Palmer, Vancouver, Wash.; Osbjorn George Reese, Seattle.

Yale Air Victim Wrote Will Before Trip Home

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Roger W. Young, 18, one of the 11 Yale men killed in the Seattle plane crash, wrote his will before leaving the campus for the Christmas holiday, his roommate revealed today.

Robert A. Smith, Brookline, Mass., said Young was in a happy mood when he penned the will on a piece of scrap paper and left it in his desk drawer. He quoted Young: "This is just in case."

France Plans to Investigate Misuse of 3 Billion Francs

Paris, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—The French government prepared today to open a sweeping investigation into the alleged misappropriation and waste of billions of francs of public funds.

The Cabinet moved swiftly after the National Assembly last night unanimously called for a full probe by February 1 and for the punishment of any persons found guilty of graft.

The scandal, said to involve several government ministries, was disclosed by the official Court of Accounts in its report for 1946-47. The present government, which took office in 1948, is not affected directly, but many of the officials involved still hold key government posts.

"Requisitions" Cited

The report cited numerous cases of "requisitioning" of large quantities of liquors, fine wines, civilian clothes, women's clothes and underwear by unauthorized government officials.

It said the state paid out more than three billion francs for food and goods requisitioned by officials and service personnel. The franc in 1946-47, the report added, was worth six times its present value. The franc was quoted at 300 to the American dollar today.

Charging corruption in the Ministry of Interior, the report said:

"The gravest abuse took place in the Surete Nationale (police), where daily travel expenses were paid to officials who made no trips and where monthly allowances were made under the name of 'police expenses' to high officials for whom they really represented supplementary salaries."

Plane Firms Involved

It also charged that airplane companies which never delivered a plane were paid handsome fees for canceling contracts.

Under "excessive expenditures," the Court of Accounts reported that millions were spent on large fleets of "official" automobiles.

It accused the French army of spending too much money in setting up its Paris headquarters in 1944-45.

The report also charged ministries with requisitioning so much furniture that the national furniture stocks became exhausted.

The War Ministry, according to the report, refused to return historic furnishings borrowed from the national stocks for a building used by General Charles de Gaulle while he headed the French government.

Maryland Schools Seek 12.5% More Money

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 3 (AP).—The Maryland Legislature is about to demonstrate again that public education doesn't come free.

State aid to book learning in 1948 cost almost 30 per cent of the total $56,500,000 charge against general funds.

For fisca 1950, Supt. Thomas G. Pullen, jr., wants $31,987,889 to foot school bills. This is an increase of 12.5 per cent over current appropriations.

Sources close to the State House say it's a certainty Governor Lane and the budget bureau have chopped something off the schools' request. But whatever sum is approved by the General Assembly which convenes Wednesday, it will be on top of millions more raised in the counties and Baltimore City by their own taxes.

The public school budget likewise does not count money borrowed on bonds to erect and modernize buildings.

It does pay these State accounts: Basic aid per classroom ($400), and per pupil ($20), teachers' retirement system and the "equalization fund."

Equalization money helps the counties meet State requirements in salaries and standards. But to qualify for it, their local tax rate must include at least 65 cents for schools.

Most of the counties now levy considerably more than the minimum to take care of their individual needs.

The budget itself is only part of the story. It seems paltry beside what Dr. Pullen says must be spent to improve school buildings.

He told the legislative council last month that $139,800,000 will be needed in the next five years to pay for buildings that are "educationally adequate and sufficiently well equipped to provide a decent program of education."

The 1947 General Assembly approved a novel "building incentive fund," through which the State guarantees $2 per pupil—up to $10—for each penny levied by the county for building.

Swirling Blizzard Hits Great Plains

Normal Hazard?

Court to Rule On Issue of Playful Poke

Is a playful poke in the rear an occupational hazard in the print shop of The Washington Times-Herald?

That was the ticklish legal problem which beset austere Judge F. Dickerson Letts in District Court yesterday.

Judge Letts, after hearing evidence from both sides, decided to sit on the matter for a while. He took the case under advisement, with grim solemnity.

Poked was Raymond A. Hawk, 33, 504 6th st. sw. while at work May 6, 1947, in the Times-Herald composing room. Poker, evidence indicated, was Maxie Marinelli, 32, 5701 Barnabas rd. se., who flicked a foot-long stick at Hawk.

After the incident the court was informed, Hawk wheeled around and chased Marinelli, who fell, breaking a hip. Subsequently, Marinelli was hospitalized and was awarded some $1000 in workmen's compensation.

The award was appealed yesterday by the Hartford Accident and Indemnity Insurance Corp. The insurance firm contended they did not have to pay because Marinelli, the injured man, was the aggressor.

Such horseplay, however, is not unusual in newspaper print shops, contended Ward Boote, general counsel for the Employment Compensation Commission. He introduced evidence that printers are inclined to give each other hot foots and put toy gun caps in machinery, particularly when the foreman is not around.

Talk Scheduled Tonight On Padre Pio's Work

Padre Pio, a Capucin monk and holy man of Italy, will be the subject of a talk by William W. Carringer at the Study Guild Catholic Library, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw., tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Carrigan conducted numerous tours to Padre Pio's monastery during the three years he was director of Red Cross air transportation between North Africa and Sicily.

By The Associated Press

A blizzard spread its frigid, white confusion over the Great Plains Monday.

Snow, swirled by winds up to 65 miles an hour, piled up huge drifts which blocked roads in some areas, and low visibility held up traffic in other locations. Near zero temperatures prevailed.

By late afternoon, the blizzard covered most of the central and western Dakotas, central and western Nebraska, western Kansas, extreme eastern Wyoming and northern Colorado.

At Philip in western South Dakota 100 travelers were marooned by snowdrifts and winds were holding up snowplows attempting to reach the town. One ranch hand in the area has been missing since Sunday when he went hunting.

Rain on the eastern fringe of the storm was turning to snow, and high winds were felt as far south as the Oklahoma panhandle.

Bus schedules were cancelled in much of the blizzard area and some buses were believed stalled in western Kansas and near Stratton, Colo. All schools closed at North Platte, Nebr.

At Goodland, Kans., where two inches of snow was piled into drifts by the maximum 65-mile wind gusts, trains were arriving late. The Rock Island Rocket was 40 minutes behind schedule.

Light snow from the storm reached as far south as Lubbock, Tex., and at Amarillo, where light snow fell, midday temperature was 15 degrees with northwest winds of 22 miles per hour.

The storm caught large numbers of cattle exposed on range land, and ranchers said the death toll among stock is expected to be high.

East of the storm, skies were cloudy to the Atlantic seaboard, and rains were reported from the Great Lakes region to the southern Mississippi Valley. Temperatures were milder in the rain area, but it was near zero in the north plains and Rockies.

At Least 90 Dead In European Storms

London, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—At least 90 persons died and several hundred were injured as a direct result of the violent storms which plagued western Europe during the New Year's weekend.

Snow, torrential rains and gales caused shipwrecks, floods and landslides and property damage estimated in millions of dollars. England, France and Italy were the worst hit. The freak weather sent the Thames over its banks, raised a waterspout in the English Channel, blew 100-mile-an-hour winds through the Eiffel Tower and dumped cloudbursts in northern Italy.

41 Are Dead In Tornadoes

"fine" homes in the east residential district were damaged. The utility official brought in a portable electric plant and an emergency crew of workers.

(David Crockett, manager of Radio Station KAMD, Camden, Ark., who visited this community, reported virtually every house and building on three residential streets were hit by the terrific wind.

(Residents at Monticello, 18 miles to the east, reported they could see a funnel swirling in the vicinity of Warren about the time the storm struck here.

Calls Situation Mess

Arkansas State Highway Sergt. Charlie Buchanan, Camden, Akr., was one of the first to bring in doctors and nurses. He described the situation as "a mess."

Other places as far away as Little Rock were sending doctors, nurses and blood plasma. State police rushed troopers to the area. The Warren National Guard unit was quickly mobilized.

It was just about a year ago that tornadoes struck about the same Louisiana-Arkansas section, killing more than a dozen persons and causing widespread damage. The center of the 1947 New Year's Eve disaster was at Cotton Vlaely, La., north of Shreveport and west of Haynesville.

Safe Robbers Get $862 Haul Over Holiday

Safe robbers got about $500 in a chain grocery store and $362 in a restaurant on Wisconsin ave. over the New Year's holiday, police learned yesterday.

Detectives believe the Giant Food Store at 4555 Wisconsin ave. nw. and the Orient Restaurant, 1715 Wisconsin, were victims of the same gang of yeggs. The grocery closed at 9 p. m. Friday and its loss was not discovered until it opened yesterday morning. Entrance was gained by sawing bars over a window and smashing the glass over a lock. The safe was opened by hammering off its dial.

The restaurant robbery occured between 11:30 p. m. Sunday and 8 a. m. yesterday. The safe was moved from a front office to a rear room and the dial was hammered off. A number of checks stolen with the $362 in cash were found later, scattered around a front yard in the 3200 block of R st. nw., police reported.

Roy L. Jones, who operates the Del Ray Restaurant at 1422 Irving st. nw., also reported that between 10:30 p. m. Sunday and 5:30 a. m. yesterday someone broke a screen and glass in a rear window and took $425 in cash from a metal box in a cabinet, overlooking about $400 more secreted elsewhere.

Interest Rates To Stay at 4%

rate the bank can charge for the entire loan.

There were claims that the 4-per-cent rate was too low to encourage banks to make loans. But Gray said about 15,000 veterans a month "can find loans they can afford and can obtain loans at 4 per cent."

Opinions varied widely on the effect of Gray's decision in the District, where GI home loans have dropped from a peak of about 900 a month in mid-1947 to about 300 a month currently, according to the VA regional office.

Major Factor Cited

Edward L. McAleer, president of the D. C. Building and Loan League, said he believed the major factor in the sharp drop in GI loans was that "the money is pretty well used up," rather than because of the 4 per cent interest limitation. Members of the building loan group here have borrowed a total of 22 million dollars, mostly during 1948, to finance present commitments, he said.

Home loan interest rates here vary between 4 and 6 per cent, with the majority of them at 5 per cent, it was reported.

Samuel E. Neel, counsel for the Mortgage Bankers Association, said he thought some bankers who have been holding off on loans to see whether the VA would raise its limit, would now go ahead if other conditions are right. Others, however, will invest in securities with a higher net return, he said. A 4 per cent mortgage, he declared, produces a net return of between 2.8 and 3.2 per cent.

A veterans' housing program, which she estimated would cost 82 million dollars was proposed yesterday by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.).

The bill would grant charters to veterans' housing associations by the Veterans' Administration for acquiring homes for sale or rental to veterans; limit sales price of average dwelling units to $10,000; set interest rates at 4 per cent or less, and provide a long-range secondary market for GI housing loans.

Action Put Off On Discharge Of Teacher

The District Board of Education yesterday for the fourth time postponed decision on whether to fire a teacher who lost a divorce case on grounds of adultery.

Board members, who were to sit in trial, adjourned after the teacher, Mrs. Edith P. Thomas, 4912 Ames st. ne., failed to appear at the hearing.

Her attorney, George McNeill, told board members she had been called to Hyattsville as a witness in an automobile accident hearing. Previously the case had been postponed once because of the illness of Mrs. Thomas, and twice for her attorney to secure additional information.

McNeill said that Mrs. Thomas was to produce character witnesses at yesterday's hearing. When they, too, failed to appear, he asked and the board agreed to receive their testimony in the form of letters. The board set Monday as the deadline.

Mrs. Thomas was suspended from her job as a teacher at the Carver Elementary School a year ago after the divorce case and charged by the school board with conduct unbecoming a teacher. She refused to resign from the school system and appealed her suspension. The board then ordered her to trial.

Dr. Bowman, Johns Hopkins Head, Retires

Baltimore, Jan. 3 (AP).—Three days after the old year, an era quietly ended for one of America's great institutions of higher learning, Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Bowman

Its president, Dr. Isaiah Bowman, who helped set the boundaries of Europe after the First World War, retired today after a 13-year tenure.

Immediately, Dr. Detlev Bronk, University of Pennsylvania biophysicist and director of the National Research Council, took over as the sixth Hopkins president.

No special ceremony signaled the change. Hopkins tradition, which Dr. Bowman helped shape, generally frowns on academic pomp.

Dr. Bowman — internationally known geographer, author and "incorrigible teacher" as a colleague called him—stepped into private life, but his friends had assurance that "I'll be buzzing around as usual."

The 70-year-old educator, member and officer of numerous learned societies, holder of many honorary degrees, has been active also in Maryland civic and governmental affairs.

He has been a close student of international affairs. He was chief territorial specialist for the American commission at the Versailles Peace Conference after World War I. He served as a special advisor to the Secretary of State in World War II.

Advocate of universal military training and of a strong America, Dr. Bowman recently remarked that "we are even now at war."

He came to Hopkins in 1935, after 20 years as head of the American Geographical Society. He balanced the university's budget, stabilized the faculty, reorganized undergraduate study in line with his conviction that "all definitions of university purpose that are not meant for cloudland have as their core the idea of a stimulating relationship between teacher and student.

His future plans? Dr. Bowman will continue to live in Baltimore, and "anybody who knows me knows I won't be living quietly."

A Judge Makes Crime Pay

New York, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—A judge's leniency paid off in 20 pints of blood today for a 14-year-old boy who is slowly bleeding to death.

Magistrate J. Roland Sala is head of the Red Cross drive in his section of Brooklyn. He became interested in the case of Vincent Viviano, 14, a victim of hemophelia. The boy underwent a kidney operation December 23, and doctors have been unable to stop the bleeding. The boy's brother died of the same disease two years ago.

Doctors held hope that Vincent could be saved if he received a massive transfusion of healthy blood which would cause his own to clot and stop the bleeding. The Red Cross sent out a call for donors.

When two men accused of street peddling without a license, appeared in court today, Judge Sala told them the story, and urged them to give a pint of blood. Then he suspended sentence against Neil Barbela, 29, and Frank Polesinelli, 30.

The men left the courtroom. A few hours later, Polesinelli telephoned Judge Sala, saying not only were he and Barbela ready to donate blood, but they had lined up 17 friends who also were ready to do so.

Judge Sala sent a police escort to bring them to the Red Cross blood donor center, where they found Sala awaiting them. He joined in the mass donation.

Join this army and see the World!

HERE'S one army you'll be tickled to death to sign up with—and for a good, long hitch at that.

It's the growing band of happy folks who are stepping out in tidy new 1949 Buicks — and they've got plenty to sound off about.

Mobility for instance. All the life and zing of big Fireball power plants cradled to velvet smoothness on Hi-Poised engine mountings.

Silk-smooth operation on city street or open highway through the near-magic of Dynaflow Drive,† available now on the Buick SUPER as well as the ROADMASTER.

†Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER models.

Easy-going ground coverage from so coil springs and pillowy big tires o oversize rims.

And what a wonderful outlook you find here! Through broad, high, full-curving windshields that really let you see.

Through deep, airy side windows that send the whole countryside passing in review—through wide, one-piece rear windows that make parking and backing much easier.

Statistically, the fact is that 4-door Sedans have 22% more glass area than before. Practically, the thing to do is sit in one of these beauties—and note how beautifully you can see the world.

Note, while you're at it, the figures on your dealer's price tags. Even they are part of a mighty happy picture that makes it advisable to get your order in without delay.

Safer Washington

Five persons are now alive who would have been killed in traffic accidents in Washington last year if the 1947 death toll had been repeated. The 25-year record low of 67 traffic deaths achieved during 1948 is a graphic testimonial to the work of the various official and citizen groups—especially the Police Traffic Division and the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic—which have made safety almost their religion. Particularly it is the result of the four E's in traffic regulation—education of motorists and pedestrians alike; enforcement of traffic laws; engineering, which has included the scientific diversion of traffic as well as various protection devices for pedestrians; and examination of drivers.

Happily the District record corresponds with the experience of at least one other major city. New York also reports an all-time low in traffic deaths, with the reduction attributed to safety campaigns. There can be no doubt that such campaigns have made marked inroads on the accident rate generally since the poignant "And Sudden Death" articles in the thirties focused attention on the slaughter on the highways. The 1948 figure for the District represents nearly a 50 per cent decrease from the 123 traffic deaths recorded in 1932—when Washington had a smaller population and there were fewer cars to contend with.

The one disturbing facet of the 1948 record is the disproportionately high number of deaths caused by streetcars and buses—24 of the 67 total. Operators were absolved of blame in 14 of the 16 fatal accidents involving streetcars, but the figure should serve to stress the need for special alertness on the part of the men who drive such vehicles. Beyond this, the safety results show the effectiveness of Washington's unique "Walk" and "Don't Walk" signs. Whatever the momentary annoyance to would-be jaywalkers, these devices have paid big dividends in reminding all pedestrians that traffic safety is a two-way proposition. And we must not forget in this connection the visual education conducted by the newspapers. This newspaper, with more pictures of traffic accidents in 1948 than ever before, has sometimes been criticized for disfiguring its pages with them, but it is the consensus that they have done their part in reducing the toll.

The Inaugural Lag

President Truman's address on the State of the Union to a joint session of the Senate and House tomorrow will come more than two weeks before his inauguration. That is not strange, for Mr. Truman is the incoming as well as the outgoing President. If Governor Dewey had been elected, however, we should have had the strange spectacle of a State-of-the-Union message on January 5 by a President with only 15 more days to serve. It would have been followed by the new President's inaugural on January 20 and by messages to Congress likely to reverse at least part of the advice of the outgoing President.

These incongruities could be corrected by having the terms of the President and Vice President begin the same time as the term of the new Congress. When Congress proposed the Twentieth Amendment abolishing the "lame-duck" session and fixing January 3 for the assembling of each new Congress, it also set inauguration day for January 20. That was to give the new House a two-week interval in which to choose a President if a tie in electoral votes should ever again make such action necessary. So long as this possibility remains, the inauguration of the President cannot be moved up to coincide with the opening of Congress.

It is interesting to note, however, that under the proposed Lodge amendment, there would no longer be any possibility of a presidential election being thrown into the House. The electoral votes of each State would be divided among the candidates in the same proportion as the popular votes were divided. A tie would then be a very remote possibility, but if it should occur the candidate with the largest popular vote would win. If this amendment is approved, and we strongly favor its approval, then the date for inauguration of the President could be moved up to coincide with the opening of Congress. The new President would be at the helm from the very beginning of the congressional session, and the outgoing President would not be expected to advise Congress after his repudiation by the voters or on the eve of his voluntary retirement.

Assuming that the Lodge amendment will be reintroduced in the present session, we think its authors may well consider amending it so as to start the presidential term and congressional terms on the same day.

Kashmir Truce

India and Pakistan signaled the new year last Saturday by concluding a truce in their 14-month unofficial war in the princely state of Jammu and Kashmir. And first word from New Delhi is that firing has actually ceased. This is good news, though it may be greeted with some reservations. Other truces, in Palestine, Indonesia, and in Kashmir itself, have been observed pretty much in the breach—to the despair of the world and the injury of the U. N. Accordingly, this truce, achieved under the persuasion of the U. N. Kashmir Commission, will, if it lasts, give the United Nations a sorely needed boost of prestige.

The chances seem fairly good that the parties will observe it. The fighting that has been in progress since October, 1947, has been somewhat desultory. Fierce and bloody battles have punctuated relatively long periods of light skirmishing or quiescence. Neither side was making much of any real military progress, and neither seemed thoroughly sold on the idea of a forceful solution. It would be pleasing to think that the two new dominions felt the impropriety of launching their independent careers in a mutual blood bath.

The truce, thus, has a certain natural quality that may enhance its durability. Much will depend on the successful management of developments under the truce terms. These have not yet been published, but are said to call for a plebiscite under U. N. supervision which will decide whether Jammu and Kashmir province goes to India or to Pakistan. An unprejudicial administration in the meantime, an honest ballot, and a smooth transfer, if the plebiscite calls for a change, offer many pitfalls.

Future Spy Committee

Almost no one, it seems, favors continuation of the Committee on Un-American Activities along the lines of its past operations. Indeed, it has been criticized by most of its own members. Representative Hebert was vigorous in his denunciation of some of its recent antics. Representative Nixon, another member, has admitted that the committee has made mistakes. He joined with Representative (now Senator) Mundt in suggesting a code of fair practice for the committee. Even though the committee has once more been accepted by the House, there is overwhelming opposition to the manner in which its work has been done.

A letter signed by 313 educators, scientists, writers, clergymen and artists urges complete abolition of the committee. These critics doubtless feel that the smearing done by the Thomas-Rankin combination outweighs the service of the committee in exposing the Communist spy scandal. But it does not follow that an important task should be abandoned just because it has been bungled by the legislators assigned to it. What is needed, in our opinion, is a committee that will go to the bottom of the Communist espionage conspiracy and bring all the pertinent facts to light without damning innocent persons and without turning that serious business into a headline-hunting carnival.

Senator McClellan has suggested that the investigation of subversive elements be taken over by a joint Senate-House committee. The first task of that body, he says, should be adoption of a code of fair procedure under which it would thereafter operate. Since Congress would be asked to approve the code, it would put the investigators under a strong injunction to respect individual rights. Certainly this would be a long step in advance.

We refuse to believe that it is necessary to abandon the exposure of traitors conspiring against the United States in order to protect innocent citizens from character assassination. Let Congress take this function from the men who have muffed it and assign the task to a more responsible group under restrictions that will enhance responsibility. Something would be accomplished merely by rescuing the committee from Representative Wood, the prospective chairman, and Representative Rankin, its dominant influence. But new personnel would not be enough. The committee needs a more specific directive than its vague license to investigate anyone and everyone suspected of any tinge of disloyalty. It needs expert investigators and fair rules of procedure. Care will have to be taken, of course, to avoid mere whitewashing in place of smearing. We think an honest, fair and thorough inquiry would most likely be obtained from a joint committee or a House subcommittee under the discipline of the Judiciary Committee.

The Missing Law

One of the less spectacular but more intriguing parts of the recent report on "Segregation in Washington" was the mystery of the missing law. The report recalled that back in 1872, when the District had a territorial government, the local legislative assembly banned racial discrimination in public accommodations. But around the turn of the century the regulation mysteriously disappeared from the compiled statutes of the District.

A correspondent recently directed attention to an act of 1869, later incorporated into the territorial laws, which forbade discrimination at licensed concerts, theatrical performances, and like entertainments. Apparently it suffered the obscure fate of the later and broader law. At any rate, there appears to be no evidence that either was explicitly repealed. So far as anyone knows they were simply dropped from the books and forgotten, a circumstance that is, to say the least, puzzling. It raises the question whether, despite the intervening change in the District government, they may not still be enforceable.

The Corporation Counsel's office, which intends to delve into the mystery, has not yet begun an inquiry owing to the press of other business. Probably the question cannot be adequately answered short of a court decision anyway. A test case would put the matter up to the Corporation Counsel in such a way that the necessary legal research could no longer be left for spare moments, if any. We believe a noninflammatory test case should be brought in a friendly attempt to get to the bottom of the mystery and find out whether either of these laws (and perhaps others) have any standing.

Truth About The T-H Act

The final report of the Joint Committee on Labor-Management Relations, popularly known as the "watchdog committee," was signed by only one of the Democratic members. Four others denounced it as a futile attempt to sustain legislation which already has been discredited in the eyes of the American people. "The report," they said, "fails to give weight to the evidence which makes it clear that the public welfare requires the immediate repeal of this anti-union measure." However, despite its Republican sponsorship, the report cannot be dismissed as merely a biased defense of the Taft-Hartley Act. For its conclusions are supported by an impressive array of evidence designed to show that the law is workable and that its enforcement has not inflicted undue hardship on labor unions. It was only to be expected that its findings would be rejected by legislators committed to outright repeal of the act.

When the Eighty-first Congress settles to the work of drafting new labor legislation, we venture to predict that the committee's report will be a valuable source of information that the lawmakers will consult for guidance, even if they retreat to the privacy of their offices to do so. For, regardless of whether the Taft-Hartley Act survives in amended form or is discarded, Congress will hardly venture to sweep away all its protective provisions, such as those aimed at suppression of unfair union practices and jurisdiction disputes, without consideration of substitute measures having the same objective. Moreover, some provision for preventing strikes that create national emergencies is imperative.

While the committee's recommendations are aimed at strengthening the provisions of the existing laws for the sake of more effective enforcement, the bulk of its report is devoted to discussion of actual operations under the Taft-Hartley Act. The record of accomplishment certainly seems to disprove exaggerated charges of its destructive effects. For example, there is an especially telling refutation of the claim that the act has restored the "era of Government by injunction." The committee points out that injunctions issued in response to complaints of unfair labor practices have been sought in only 6 cases while in the 8 months preceding last November 1, 22 petitions for injunctive relief from secondary boycotts were filed, with 255 cases dismissed, withdrawn or adjusted at the regional-office level. Finally six injunctions were asked for by the President and granted under the national emergency provisions of the act. An examination of typical cases listed in which injunctive relief was sought certainly demonstrates the need for this kind of protection and at the same time indicates that the weapon of the injunction has been used with commendable restraint.

It is also worth noting that 660 of the 1188 charges of unfair labor practices filed against unions since passage of the act were brought by employers; the rest were filed by individual employes and other labor unions. During that same period, moreover, 4,136 charges were filed against employers—a clear indication, as the report states, that the major part of NLRB's time will continue to be spent in preventing unfair labor practices banned by the Wagner Act.

The report further points out that suits for violation of contracts between employers and unions and suits for damages brought against unions have not, as predicted, resulted in draining union treasuries. Since the Taft-Hartley Act became effective, about 57 suits have been brought under the relevant provisions of the law, 37 by employes and 16 by unions and one by an employe against an employer. Of the employer suits 15 have been settled by agreement and 5 have been dismissed by the courts, 16 are still pending and in one instance an employer secured the setting aside of an arbitral award. So far no damages have been recovered by anyone. The committee concludes that the mere existence of a remedy has caused both employers and employes to be more circumspect and responsible in their dealings with one another.

There is also a wealth of suggestive material in that section of the report dealing with welfare funds—a subject to which increasing attention is being given because of the demands of labor unions that such plans be made the subject of compulsory collective bargaining. The committee makes no recommendations on this controversial issue, but it does suggest the need for amendments to safeguard the administration of welfare funds in the way contemplated by the Taft-Hartley Act, the protective provisions of which are currently being circumvented.

Recommendations intended to strengthen the effectiveness of the Mediation and Conciliation Service, to require non-Communist oaths of employers as well as employes and to exclude from NLRB jurisdiction local businesses only remotely affected by interstate commerce would make for better enforcement of existing labor laws. But in view of the precarious status of the Taft-Hartley Act, recommendations based on the assumption of its survival are of less immediate interest than the analyses and discussions that throw light on major policy issues that will have to be faced or, at any rate, ought to be faced before any new labor legislation is enacted.

AMA's Fight

"How best can the Nation's health be assured?" promises to be one of 1949's burning issues. After discussing the subject with many people of varied occupations, I find that the consensus of their views shapes up like this: "We hope that a fair middle course can be steered between the Scylla of gaps in medical care and the Charybdis of 'state medicine.'" The folks we interviewed are earnestly concerned over the first but are even more worried over the prospect of the second.

Organized medicine has declared war against compulsory health insurance legislation and has assessed its members $25 apiece to finance the fight. This seems a wholly legitimate activity provided the organization complies with lobbying registration regulations. It is rather illogical for American Medical Association opponents to call the levy a "slush fund," especially when it is contrasted with the large amounts of taxpayers' cash used to develop and publicize the case for the compulsory health program.

The AMA hierarchy is, however, far more vulnerable to accusations of arrogance and public relations ineptitude. Take for example their childish attempts to slur some of their Ph. D. opponents at Senate hearings by ostentatiously calling them "Mister." Or their describing the Truman-Ewing program as "Communist inspired." Or their saying that Government employment would "degrade and deteriorate" the physicians and surgeons who entered it. (If this were true, it is hard to understand why the AMA has employed on its own staff several former officials of State and city health departments.)

These boners are cited only because we would far rather see organized medicine lead with potent lefts and rights than with its chin. The physicians and surgeons who make up the AMA have plenty of sound facts, figures and logic on their side—enough, we believe, to assure the continuance and expansion of medical care in the United States largely as it has been done in the past. With this abundance of good ammunition, aren't they foolish to wage the contest with duds? RAY H. EVERETT.

Pope's Message

Neither the Anglican Bishops' pronouncement from Lambeth, nor the assertion of the United Christian Churches at Amsterdam has the force and realism of the Pope's Christmas message delivered from Rome. Both the statement of the bishops and the opinion of the churchmen issued from Amsterdam seemed to minimize the dangers of communism. When the Pope speaks of the need of Christians standing for the defense of rights that are granted man by the authority of heaven, the head of Catholic Christendom is far more realistic than these other group opinions.

If property rights, free trade and national authority are to be maintained on earth, those who call themselves Christians must understand that atheistic principles taught by Karl Marx advocate the seizure of people's property, and the advancement of the cause of materialistic rule the world over by the proletariat which imperils the legal power of governments to maintain themselves against lawlessness. We are faced (as in Berlin) by stubborn forces that are diabolical, unrighteous, and infernal in origin. The only hope for humanity is for aggressive Christian action against those immoral and unethical anarchists.

Negroes At American

In his letter of December 29, Mr. Rob Roy Ratliff expresses his pride that American University admits Negroes to its special downtown branch, the School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs. He then states:

"The recent segregation report and subsequent newspaper articles have failed to note this oasis in what otherwise appears to be a desert of segregation and racial conflict."

I assume that Mr. Ratliff refers to the report of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital, entitled Segregation in Washington.

The fifth paragraph on page 78 of that report points out that American University admits colored Americans to its off-campus School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs but does not admit them to its campus classes.
PHINEAS INDRITZ.
Washington.

"Peacemakers"

On Page 1 on your December 27 issue appears a statement made by a pacifist organization called the Peacemakers, who call upon the Government to "either stop prosecuting those who defy the draft or also prosecute people 'like ourselves' who promote such disobedience." It is noted that many of this group are ministers.

It is regrettable that with the crying need for spiritual leadership in our world today, those who should be saving souls, in too many instances, instead are lobbying for specific legislation.

In this instance if the "Peacemakers" are as consistent as they ask the Government to be, they should seek a country without the blot of war on its history and transfer their allegiance to it forthwith. As long as they remain in the United States and benefit by the sacrifices and travail of war by which our country was born, they do not practice what they preach and should therefore stop preaching.

Perhaps such inconsistent citizens only require extended travel to other parts of the world to appreciate what a wonderful country we have, and that you do not get something for nothing, not even free speech.
LIDA K. COLE.

Canwell Committee

In the December 2 issue of The Washington Post, an editorial, "Fair Practices," based on materials some friend of the Washington State Canwell Committee had sent your paper, suggested that perhaps this particular committee was not so oppressive as others. Since an earlier editorial ("Little Thomases," August 28) had blasted the Washington State Committee, the second was clearly your paper's effort to "do justice."

The truth is, however, that the Canwell Committee has followed the same sordid procedures as the Dies Committee, the Thomas-Rankin Committee, the Tenney Committee, and the subcommittee of the House Labor Committee operating in Evanston.

One of Canwell's witnesses, Mr. George Hewitt, stated under oath that he had met one of the accused in Moscow, where she was being trained, he said, as a secret agent. At the time Mr. Hewitt says she was in Moscow she was on the West Coast, as newspaper clippings demonstrate.

The same witness testified that two others o the accused had trained in a secret national Communist school in New York State. The course lasted several weeks, he testified, and he positively identified the two professors as having attended. Yet each of the professors can show that he was not in New York State that year, but was, in fact, out West.

When lawyers for the accused insisted on making objections and on their clients' right to cross-examine accusing witnesses, the lawyers were forcibly ejected. When one of the accused tried to answer slanders against the civic institution with which she is connected, she was forcibly ejected. When her husband tried to tell the committee that she was not in Moscow at the time nor for the purposes charged, he was silenced under threat of forcible ejection.

When the two professors showed publicly that they had not been, as charged, at the national Communist training center concerning which Mr. Hewitt testified, and while efforts were being made to get public officials to bring a perjury action against him, Mr. Hewitt made one final blast. He said that it was an "old Communist trick" to attack witnesses as perjurers and to try to bring suit gainst them. That was supposed to clinch his case.

Another of these recurrent bearers of false witness was J. B. Mathews, of Dies Committee notoriety. His most novel testimony was that General Eisenhower is a fellow traveler because Columbia University accepted from the Polish Government a chair in Polish language and culture. Otherwise, Mathews went through his familiar routine about Consumers Union, committees of scientists concerned with peaceful uses of atomic energy, committees to help Loyalist Spain, the various committees to push civil rights matters, the Washington Pension Union, and other organizations all being "Communist fronts."

Professors active in these "fronts," he said, were all Communists or "fellow travelers." If they were Communists, he said, they would deny it.

Since there will be war between the United States and Russia, he said, and since our foreign policy rests on that premise, the accused, he charged, are traitors.

With Mr. Mathews defining the terms, what could the accused say a bald "yes" or "no" to? Yes, that they were traitors? No that they didn't want peace, civil liberties, a democratic Spain, or old-age pensions?

The only remedy the accused had, said Dave Beck, Teamster Union head and member of the board of regents at the University of Washington, was for the professors on the campus to stand up and be counted against communism. The only trouble with that, of course, is that it demands as a condition of university employment that a man either give up all progressive views or hold to them while swearing with each breath that he isn't a Communist and denouncing others as Communists to prove his own purity. If one believes that the United States Constitution doesn't prohibit persons from having and expressing Communist views as well as Republican, Democratic, or Progressive views, the requirement that he must join a militant chorus against a minority is a high price to pay for a professional job.

The Canwell Committee, therefore, like the Thomas-Rankin Committee, is helping bring to America the very opposite of the liberty which it pretends to be defending.

Despite its desire to be fair, even to the Canwell Committee, The Washington Post was mistaken in tentatively exempting this committee from its general censure of all such committees. The Washington Post was right in its earlier condemnation.

Washington Calling

Reform In The House

THE WORLD does change and now and then elections do count for something. That is the real meaning of what happened in the caucus of Democratic House members Saturday night.

No matter what occurs later in the session, the significance of that victory cannot be wiped out. It is hard to see how a handful of men can be continued in tyrannical power through the medium of that old-fashioned road block, the Rules Committee.

Even if the Republicans, with the aid of die-hard Southerners, should checkmate the Democratic leadership, it can be only a temporary setback. The tyranny of the Rules Committee simply cannot be allowed in any Government calling itself representative.

As Democrats poured out of the House chamber at the close of the four-hour meeting, there was a thrilling sense that they had seen the end of an era. It was not merely that the liberal-moderate wing of the party had triumphed. Perhaps even more important was the fact that the victory had come with the aid of so many Southern votes.

Of the 100 to 110 Southerners, only 48 voted against the amendment which permits the House by a majority vote to call up a measure if the Rules Committee bottles it up more than 21 days.

Most of the House members from Texas, North Carolina and Florida voted for the reform. There was a split in the delegations from South Carolina and Georgia.

Chief defenders of the past were Representative John Rankin of Mississippi and Representative Eugene Cox of Georgia. Cox, as a member of the Rules Committee, is one of the handful whose votes have been equal to the votes of 70 or 75 House members through the power of the committee to obstruct.

RANKIN TRIED hard to persuade the Southerners that the objective of the change was to put through a fair employment practices law. He used all the old platitudes on white supremacy in the South. But it was as though he talked at a stone wall.

"Mississippi did not win this election," House Majority Leader John McCormack said after the caucus had listened patiently to Rankin's harangue.

McCormack made a deep impression on most of those present. He was firm yet tactful, patient but insistent.

"I would regret anything that would divide the Democratic Party," he said of the proposed change in the power of the Rules Committee.

"But there are those who tried to divide the party. We mean to have harmony. But it must be the harmony of the majority. We have a job to do, given us by the voters."

For the first time in 10 years, the caucus voted to bind the members present in accord with the action taken unless they had given their voters specific pledges to the contrary. Even last-ditch Southerners will find it hard to buck that decision, particularly since many of these die-hards are already under the shadow of helping and encouraging the abortive Dixiecrat rebellion.

ALMOST AS significant was the election to the House Ways and Means Committee of four Administration Democrats pledged to the program for which President Truman campaigned. The four, along with two others who were restored to membership, will be part of a majority that can now set the tone of the new House, since the Democratic majority will make assignments for Democrats to all other committees.

Chairman Robert Doughton of Ways and Means, who has been accustomed to give orders, spoke for his own candidate, Representative Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia. In spite of Doughton's plea, Stanley ran fifth and failed to win a place.

Finally, of course, the old coalition of Republicans plus Southern bourbonism may block any basic change. But those who take part in this deliberate obstructionism run a grave risk, it seems to me, of defeat when they come up for re-election next year. For the country has been aroused to an understanding of what the outdated, outmoded rules of Congress can mean in relation to the practical necessities of housing, education, medical care.

For years the oligarchy of the Rules Committee has been supreme and supremely indifferent. Senator Robert A. Taft could get his own housing bill through the Senate. But all his pleading did not move the three or four Republicans who sat beside that toll gate and listened to the lobbyists instead of the people.

In a variety of ways it can be shown that the election last fall was far more concerned with Congress than with the Presidency. If the Democratic caucus is any proof, Congress knows that. There is a chance for constructive leadership, reversing the recent tradition which has made the House the stronghold of reaction.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Relations With Britain And France

IT IS difficult for us to realize that our influence in Europe can be exerted successfully only as we are able to discern the course of history and to assist it. We cannot plan the future of Europe, and then with dollars, advice, the Voice of America and the atomic bomb, create the Europe we have imagined. All we can hope to do is to discover what the future of Europe is tending to be, using our influence to make the best of what is possible.

Lippmann

These general remarks are pertinent to our relations with Great Britain and with France. They are our two principal allies, and unless we can come to a right understanding of the national interest of each of them, no common policy can be worked out. Yet a common policy will have to be worked out before we can wisely and safely enter the negotiations with the Soviet Union about the settlement of Germany and of Europe.

THERE ARE, to put it most simply, two misconceptions which we shall have to correct. The one is that Great Britain is a European nation. The other is that the French think of the Germans as their perpetual enemies.

THE BRITISH nation has, I am convinced, come definitely to the decision—after much debate and searching of soul—that it does not feel itself to be a European nation and that its vital interests do not lead it to enter into a European system.

It is true that Mr. Bevin took the initiative on the Marshall Plan and on Western Union, and that Mr. Churchill is the apostle of the idea of European unity. Neverless, having tried the experiment of thinking of themselves as Europeans, the British nation now know that they cannot do it. This is one of the facts of life which it will be better to recognize frankly. There is no use glossing it over because Congress and the American people voted for the European Recovery Program on the theory that Great Britain would take the leadership in the political and economic unification of Europe.

We cannot, as Governor Dewey put it in the campaign, push, prod and encourage Great Britain to enter a European system. If we try to force the British to do what their instinct and their ideas of their interests make them wish not to do, they will find themselves interfering with the unification of Europe instead of promoting it.

THE UNDERLYING direction of French policy has been obscured and disturbed by the disputes which have their origin way back in the Roosevelt-Hull-Murphy period, and have become embittered in the Clay-Draper period, of our German policy. The way these disputes have been brought to the surface has produced the net impression that the hereditary conflict between France and Germany is irreconcilable, and that our European policy is doomed to vacillate between appeasing the Germans and placating the French.

This is, I am satisfied, a superficial and obsolescent view of French-German relations. The true view—true in the sense that it forecasts the future—is the realization that neither France nor Germany is likely again to be a world power, and that the issue between them is whether they can be reconciled and united, or whether Germany, revived and reconstructed, is to become the principal ally in Europe of the Soviet Union.

ONCE we see the issue this way, the French resistance to Anglo-American postwar policy in Germany is not irrational, destructive and selfish, a mere anti-Germanism. It is a struggle, not always lucid and fully realized and competently explained, on the part of the French to have the new Germany become a Germany with which they can be partners and allies. The French, who know much more about Germany than we do, have understood that the effect of our policy is to produce the kind of Germany, and to encourage the kind of Germans, with whom it will never be possible for France to reach a reconciliation.

Because they have objected to our German policy, agreeing only under duress, many of our officials take the view that French policy is inveterately and implacably anti-German.

Yet what the French are opposing is not so much the Germans as Anglo-American policy in Germany. This policy is fostering a restoration and a revival of the very tendencies in Germany—nationalist, centralist and reactionary—which will again make Germany anti-French and anti-European.

THE HOPE of European unity—as Mr. Churchill with his clairvoyance saw long ago—must be founded upon the hope of a Franco-German reconciliation. If that is to be promoted, it will be necessary for London and Washington to stop thinking of France as a neurotic poor relation who has to be kept in good humor while we in our wisdom shape the future of Europe.

The French have a weak government, a weak army, and their finances are in disorder. But they will restore themselves only if and when they are able to feel that in making the effort to restore their own authority they are serving the vital interests of France in relation to Germany and the continent. The greatest assistance we can render to France is not the dollars we give them—necessary though they are—but is to concede to them their place in the European system, to recognize that in the solution of the Franco-German problem France, not General Clay and the Pentagon and General Robertson and the Foreign Office—should have the initiative and the leadership.

Off The Record

"Oh, Jim!—I hope you didn't break your New Year's resolution!"

Auto Dealer Is Still 'Missing' As Subcommittee's Life Ends

A suburban Washington new-car dealer who reportedly disappeared last month to avoid subpenas of the Macy subcommittee investigating automobile sales practices, remained "uninvestigated" yesterday as the subcommittee's life ended.

Contempt citations may be sought against the "missing" dealer, however, after a new subcommittee is organized by the Public Works Committee, Representative William M. Whittington (D., Miss.), prospective subcommittee chairman, indicated.

Whittington left up in the air the question of whether the auto inquiry will be continued, telling The Washington Post he was "enthusiastic" about the evidence turned up by the subcommittee, but adding he felt generally that extension of such probes should be ruled upon by the new Congress.

A report of the subcommittee's attempts to secure testimony from the auto dealer and a bookkeeper for the firm was presented to the Public Works Committee by Representative W. Kingsland Macy, subcommittee chairman, before yesterday's noon deadline for any possible action.

Representative George A. Dondero (R., Mich.), chairman of the Public Works Committee, said he would be unable to act on the report in the short time available before the 12 o'clock deadline. Possible action against the dealer would have included a request to the United States Attorney for a bench warrant requiring the dealer's appearance.

Whittington, who is slated to succeed Dondero when the committee is organized under the Democrats, said he believes "those who flouted the subcommittee are in contempt of the committee and Congress."

"I am opposed to letting go unpunished anyone in contempt of a committee of Congress," he said. "I am sure the committee, when it is organized, will take whatever action is necessary against anyone who was in contempt of the previous committee."

Macy said his group has also had two other cases whose officers did not respond to subpenas. He declared he would seek to present the record of these cases, either to the new Public Works Committee, or during the current rules debate in the House.

"The record will show these cases as instances where a committee of Congress can be flouted as it nears the end of its legal life," he said. "I hope it will result in strengthening the power of committees, which, after all, goes back to the power of the House. I think that is more important than the particular case we were trying to investigate."

Subcommittee sources revealed that two investigators attempting to serve subpenas on the local auto dealer on December 15 and 16 were told the firm's officers were on a hunting trip.

On December 17, according to this account, a subpena returnable December 20 was served on the firm's bookkeeper. He did not show up, and the firm's attorney told a subcommittee representative they had no power to subpena any but the officers of the firm.

The lawyer, who insisted he did not know where the officers were, later said the firm's records would not be made available unless the committee could guarantee there would be no publicity. He was told that if the records showed nothing wrong, there would be no publicity, but apparently this did not satisfy his clients.

Neither Macy nor Dondero would release the name of the local auto dealer whose officers eluded the subcommittee's subpenas. Dondero, as committee chairman, said he had not read the report and thus would not disclose any of its information at this time.

Code Proposes Reforms in 'Hill' Probes

A new code for Congressional investigations, designed to grant accused persons a hearing and to curb headline-conscious Congressmen, was proposed by administration leaders on Cauitol Hill yesterday.

Ostensibly, the plan was not aimed at any particular committee. But it results from a furore over the methods of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Critics have charged this committee with failing to give hearings to accused persons and with bidding for publicity.

In the House the code was introduced by Representative McCormack (D., Mass.), floor leader. The Senate floor leader, Senator Lucas (D., Ill.), announced he would offer a similar proposal.

"Some committees use their privileges in a manner which violates American standards of fair play," Lucas said.

Under McCormack's proposal, a person who believes testimony before a Senate or House committee has damaged his reputation would be permitted to:

1. File a sworn statement in his own behalf.
2. Testify personally.
3. Call and examine witnesses.
4. Cross-examine for not more than an hour, personally or by counsel, any witness whose testimony he feels adversely affected him.

The resolution also would allow witnesses called before congressional committees to be accompanied by attorney and to buy stenographic transcripts of public or private testimony.

Committee men would not be allowed to issue any report until the full committee approved by a majority vote.

No committee member or employe could file or make public any statement adversely commenting on anyperson until that person had been notified and been given an opportunity to present a sworn statement on the subject.

Members and committee employes would not be allowed to lecture or write about the committees' activities or reports while a member of or working for the committees.

Judge Awaits Doctors' Word On Thomas

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Walter Reed Hospital physicians were directed yesterday to determine whether Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), is too sick to stand trial on a "kickback" conspiracy-fraud indictment.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court delayed Thomas' trial until January 17 to give the doctors a chance to complete their examination.

The action was taken after Judge Schweinhaut was told that a recurring stomach hemorrhage "might very well" cause the Congressman's death. The prognosis was made in an affidavit signed by Thomas' physician, Dr. Frederick R. Kanning, of Allandale, N. J., and given the court by defense attorney William H. Collins.

The affidavit disclosed Thomas suffered a severe hemorrhage from stomach ulcers on December 21, and concluded "because of the recentness of the last hemorrhage, any excessive physical or nervous or mental disturbance or strain is very likely to precipitate another attack of bleeding, and I feel that any such hemorrhage might very well prove fatal."

Thomas entered Walter Reed Hospital after he was sworn into office on Capitol Hill, Collins told The Washington Post last night. The New Jersey spy hunter had been hospitalized more than four months during 1948. Space for Thomas at the hospital was reserved last month, Collins said.

Both the Government and counsel for co-defendant Miss Helen Campbell objected to delaying the trial, which had been set for January 10.

George Morris Fay, United States attorney here, commented that there might be "just as much excitement" at the opening session of Congress as there would be in the courtroom.

The judge disagreed, saying that at the Capitol, the surroundings were more pleasant than in a courtroom. He said the session probably lasted little more than an hour.

"I don't want to kill that man," Fay said. "But I would like to see him have an early trial."

In asking for the Walter Reed prognosis of Thomas' illness, Judge Schweinhaut said he was troubled by the questions: "Is it going to last forever. Will he ever be able to come to trial?"

Obviously troubled over the case, the jurist commented, "I had an experience once that scared me."

He said that he once ignored a last-minute warning by a lawyer that a convicted housewife-thief had a bad heart and the woman was given a one-year jail sentence. She died during the course of her incarceration, the judge related.

John R. Fitzpatrick said Miss Campbell, Thomas' onetime secretary, objected to any continuance for personal reasons. She said that she was unable to get Federal employment until "she proves her innocence," according to the lawyer.

At Los Alamos

Atom Funds Held Spent To Entertain

Use of confidential counter-espionage funds at the Los Alamos, N. M., Atomic energy project for "entertainment purposes" was reported yesterday by the House Executive Expenditures Committee.

The committee said it had learned that this parctice was followed for a time both before and after the Atomic Energy Commission took charge of the porject in July 1947. When it was brought to the attention of the present manager, Carroll L. Tyler, it was discontinued.

Terming this an "improper and illegal use of the fund," the committee said in a report to the House:

"Responsibility for improper use of these funds is not fixed by the subcommittee (which investigated operations of the project). The subcommittee recognized that the manager in his capacity has many distinguished visitors and some entertainment must be provided."

The committee said, however, it felt that entertainment funds for Los Alamos should be specifically appropriated by Congress.

The subcommittee, upon whose findings the report was based, consisted of Representatives Snyder (R., W. Va.), chairman, Chenoweth (R., Colo.) and Manasco (D., Ala.).

In general, the report said, the subcommittee felt there has been a "great deal of waste and extravagance" in the management of the Los Alamos project.

Some of this probably was unavoidable during the war, the report said, but continued:

"However, while the Atomic Energy Commission has taken certain corrective steps, action was not taken as speedily as circumstances demanded. The present manager has effected some economies, but much remains to be accomplished."

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday saw the following White House callers:

10 a. m.—Cabinet.

11—Myron C. Taylor.

11:30—Former FTC Chairman Robert E. Freer.

12:30 p. m.—Robert Lovett, Undersecretary of State, with Walter Bedell Smith, Ambassador to Moscow.

3:15 — Paul Fitzpatrick, New York State Democratic chairman with Chas. Allen, jr.

3:30—Budget Director James E. Webb.

Mystery Man Heard by Jury

New York, Jan. 3 (NYHT).—A mystery witness testified today before the Federal grand jury investigating spy activities.

All that could be learned about him was his name—Felix August Inslerman. He appeared before the panel, which last sat on December 22, for 15 minutes. He will be on tap again at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Thomas J. Donegan, special assistant attorney general in charge of the inquiry, refused to give any data on the new witness, while his lawyer offered only this bit about Inslerman: "He tells me he was never employed by the United States Government."

Two others who testified today were Whittaker Chambers, who has worn a path to the grand jury room, and Miss Belle Newcomb, secretary to Francis B. Sayre, former Assistant Secretary of State.

Smoking his usual pipe and wearing a black tie, Chambers submitted to a 10-minute interview when he came out of the grand jury room. Miss Newcomb ducked and when caught up with in a hallway she said, "I hope they are finished with me."

Prohibition Law With 'Teeth' Urged

Prohibition "with teeth in it" was urged last night as the only effective answer to the problem of alcoholism.

The plea for a ban on alcoholic T. Zottoli, associate justice of the T. Zottoli, associate justice of fthe Boston Municipal Court.

Judge Zottli made his demand in a speech before the convention of the American Temperance Society at the Sligo Seventh-Day Adventist Church in Takoma Park.

"Clinics and free hospitalization for the inebriate are not a successful answer," the justice asserted.

"Massachusetts for instance spent millions of dollars on the experiment of hospitalization of the inebriate without achieving any material improvement over the current penological system, under which drunkards can be given prison sentences, although the recommendations of psychiatry were followed in full," he declared.

The speaker also urged that drinkers be licensed, the fee being used to care for alcoholics and their dependents.

Earlier Edward B. Dunford, of Washington, attorney for the Temperance League of America, outlined legal aspects of the liquor situation.

About 150 temperance leaders from the United States and Canada are attending the four-day convention which will be climaxed with a mass meeting in Constitution Hall Thursday night.

Speakers at today's session will include Dr. Howard E. Hamlin of Columbus, Ohio, supervisor of health and narcotic education in the Ohio Department of Education.

Earlier, Walter J. Hoshal, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Kentucky, said every area in his State which has adopted prohibition by local option is "more prosperous and has less drinking and crime."

Hoshal said dry forces have won local option elections in 92 of Kentucky's 120 counties. He said this means 82 per cent of the State's area and 64 per cent of its population are now dry.

Postlude

Bass Shows Rare Art in Recital Here

By Paul Hume

Doda Conrad, Polish-American bass, and Erich Itor Kahn, pianist, presented a program of unusual artistry last night in the Phillips Gallery.

From his broad repertoire, Conrad chose a solo cantata of Haydn, six Schubert songs, a new cycle by Henri Sauguet and three arias of Gounod. He also sang a new song of Poulenc, and added a single core by the same composer.

The Sauguet cycle, given its world premiere in Conrad's New York recital one week ago, is called "Infernal Visions." Poems by Max Jacob tell of an hallucinatory fear of the Inferno. These are set in a variety of moods, each capturing a different facet of the pervading psychosis. Sauguet's talent is stamped with his French ancestry. His compositions are valid creations of a man raised in the traditions of song illustrated in Faure, Debussy and Maurice Ravel.

While Conrad's interpretive powers were at their height throughout the entire recital, they reached subtleties in expounding the Sauguet cycle which were not required in the preceding Schubert songs. His art is rare and one to be studied by all who would travel the profundities of great art singing.

Thus Conrad, with gratifying support and equal insight from Kahn, made Josef Haydn's miniature drama of the partition of the world a fascinating study in pictorializing in sound. The Schiller poem gave Haydn opportunity for the kind of thing he later perfected in the Creation and the Seasons.

In Schubert songs, Conrad makes poetry and music move the listener by his conviction of their greatness. The pain of "Thou Lovest Me Not," the continuing happiness of "Greeting," and the boundlessness of the Tartarus song are all so right, and so affecting. But Conrad should adjust his singing of the word "gegruesst" which was at all times unfathomable.

Gounod arias provided a stylish close to the perfectly balanced program. They were sung with an elan all their own. Preceding them, Francis Poulenc's new song for bass, a hymn taken from the Roman breviary, was deeply moving.

Conrad was in his happiest vocal estate. His voice seems smoother than in previous seasons, and his work completely assured. In all of this he was ably seconded by Mr. Kahn. They will return with a different program in two weeks, and should not be missed.

U. S. Workers To Be Allowed Time to Vote

Federal employes will be given "reasonable" time off to vote in the Montgomery County Charter Council election January 6, Gerald D. Morgan, chairman of the Charter committee's legal committee, yesterday said he had been informed.

This word was received, he said, from Donald Dawson, administrative assistant to the President, who told him a memorandum issued last July 24 would apply in this instance.

Ten candidates will appear on the ballots for election to seven council seats. A full slate bears the indorsement of the Charter Council. They are:

P. Garland Ligon, District No. 1; Augustus R. Selby, District No. 2; Thomas C. Kelley, District No. 3; Mrs. Dorothy S. Himstead, District No. 4; J. Douglas Bradshaw, District No. 5, and Frederic P. Lee and Dr. Lewis Meriam, councilmen-at-large.

Independents are Charles K. Davies, jr., District No. 2; Romeo W. Horad, District No. 5, and Mrs. Alma T. Opal, councilman-at-large. Horad is a Negro.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Opal yesterday charged that "mandatory selection" of a slate by Charter leaders has resulted in a "one-party system." She called on voters to elect the "independent" candidates.

Placing the cost of "this so-called democratic election" at $15,000, she declared that the people, if they are going to spend "that kind of money," should elect four Charter and three independent candidates "so that all problems will be thoroughly aired."

Council Asks Law Changes

The Hyattsville City Council last night approved three bills recommended by its legislative committee for approval by the Maryland General Assembly.

They were designed to:

1. Increase the city fire tax from 10 to 13 cents for each $100 assessed valuation.

2. Authorize a $100,000 bond issue for land and construction of a new fire house in West Hyattsville. The plan for the bond issue calls for amortization over a 15-year period.

3. Effect three changes in the city's present street improvement law.

The changes in the street improvement law would include:

1. Amendment of present laws to include construction of alleys. There are now no improved alleys in Hyattsville. Cost of construction would be assessed against abutting property owners.

2. Amendment of the present law to exempt one half of corner lot street improvement costs, not exceeding 50 feet, providing that all remaining costs be spread over the entire project to include property owners on the improved street as a whole.

3. Authority to permit the city to construct sidewalks anywhere in Hyattsville.

Lombardo, Goodman Bands Are Booked for Inaugural Ball

The orchestras of Guy Lombardo and Benny Goodman will play at the Inaugural Ball to be held at the National Guard Armory on January 20, Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the Inaugural Committee, said yesterday.

Hildreth said he had been informed by James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, that the AFM would provide the bands as part of its participation in the inauguration. Plans for the ball call for three bands to provide continuous music. The third has not been named.

More than 1500 Boy and Girl Scouts and members of high school cadet corps will serve along the inaugural parade route as ushers, ticket takers and aides to medical units, Hildreth said, adding that this will result in "a saving of thousands of dollars to the Inaugural Committee."

Over the weekend committee members began the job of distributing thousands of tickets for the inaugural ball and parade grandstands. Another job, that of mailing inaugural medals is now in progress.

Orders are being received by mail for the inaugural concert and vaudeville show to be presented in the Armory the night of January 19, but tickets have not been placed on sale.

John F. Morrissey, chairman of the parade grandstand ticket sales committee, said his office is selling "over 1000 tickets a day," with sales to date of $115,383. Tickets are available in the $3, $4 and $6 stands, he said.

One on the Aisle—

J. Arthur Mixes Tasteless Dish

By Richard L. Coe

THE WORST THING that could happen to a girl in Victorian English fiction was for her to be a governess. The worst thing that could happen to a man was to be born under the bar sinister of a great, landed family.

Both these distressing characters are the leads of "Blanche Fury," now on the National's unnatural screen. If you think the combination makes a good movie, you couldn't be more wrong.

Though the trick worked beautifully for such somber enchantments as "Jane Eyre" and "Wuthering Heights," it's artificial, phony and dull in J. Arthur Rank's lush British import.

The story is from one of those novels by a prolific Englishwoman who sometimes calls herself Joseph Shearing. "So Evil My Love" was the most recent from the Shearing-Marjorie Bowen typewriter to be seen here, a Paramount offering filmed in England with Ray Milland. I don't know how many books Shearing-Bowen has turned out, but I'm told the total is phenomenal.

Obviously the stories are concocted in cookbook style. Take a couple of strong-minded characters, one female, one male, mix well with lavish settings beneath whose apparent respectability lurk illicit passions, intrigue, sudden death and all sorts of skeleton-packed closets. Perhaps in written form the recipe has zest. But in the National's movie, it's a flat, tasteless dish.

"BLANCHE FURY," a Cineguild picture of Eagle Lion release produced by Anthony Haverlock-Allen, directed by Marc Allegret, screenplay by Audrey Lindop and Cecil McGivern, adapted from the novel by Joseph Shearing, dialogue by Hugh Mills. At the National.

Valerie Hobson, who has a lean, interesting face and the disregard for cleavage customary with heroines of British costume films, plays the impoverished lady of quality. She's had a rough time on her respectable own after the death of her parents, and when she gets the chance to join her rich uncle and tutor the small daughter of her widower-cousin, she snaps at it.

Murder, at Last

This brings her to one of those lush old castles surrounded by dazzling greensward. To assure her future, she soon marries her cousin. All would be well were it not for the bar sinister.

For living on the place as steward is the tall, handsome Stewart Granger, illegitimate son of the late owner, from whose estate the present owners presumably bought the place. If this lad can prove he's legitimate, he can take over from the unrightful Fury family. This being fiction, Love Flames between governess-wife and steward-pretender. After an hour's running time, the film finally permits two thumping murders to clear the way for Granger.

Valerie reckons without Granger's darksome insanity; he plots without realizing that she is a Good Woman. She turns him in, he hangs, the stepdaughter is killed the same instant and finally Valerie dies in childbirth, her son being Granger's and, fatefully, the rightful line is restored.

Why I'm going into all this nonsense I can't imagine. There are too many holes in the plotting even to deserve this cursory outline. Despite the lush beauty of England's rural settings and the lavishness of costumes and decor, the effort is witless, incredible and passing dull.

All "Blanche Fury" goes to prove is that when it comes to the drug-store fiction level J. Arthur Rank can outdo "The Foxes of Harrow."

For short subjects, the National has a sports parade lauding the attractions of Florida's Boca Raton, a spot well known to wartime radar students and one which now couldn't have a more seasonal plug, and a pleasant camera study of what I took to be Stockholm in "Symphony of a City."

Hey! MORE SUNDAY POST COMICS!

Starting January 9th in Sunday's Post

50% More Pages

A bigger and better Sunday comics section! That's the New Year's gift from The Washington Post to its readers. Beginning next Sunday, on January 9, the Sunday Post comic section will have 50% more pages each week. As the paper shortage has become less acute, The Post has been able to give more to its readers. First came more news. Then more space in the women's pages. Then two pages of comics daily. And now the Sunday comics get their big boost.

7 Brand New Sunday Comics

With more pages come more comics. There will be 14 more comics in the Sunday Post—almost double the present number! The new ones have been carefully selected: First comes a new Sunday edition of Mark Trail, plus a separate strip called Trailways which everyone will love for the animal drawings in color. Then there's Body Guard, full of excitement, action and suspense, intelligently written and sharply drawn. Pixie Puzzles will fascinate the children, and Let's Explore Your Mind is equally absorbing to the grown-ups. Our Bill is another teen-ager, drawn by that master satirist who does Penny. And Chlorine, the sensational secretary, is guaranteed to convulse every working girl in Washington.

Plus 7 Pre-War Comics Back

That war-time paper shortage squeezed out some of The Post favorites. Now the increase in the size of the Sunday funnies brings these comics back again. Here comes Nancy, with her stubborn friend Sluggo and her glamorous aunt Fritzi. Here comes Little Joe, the cowboy kid, with his sidekick Utah. Here comes Ze General from across the border. Looie the lawyer is back again, and so is Smitty's little brother Herby, in a comic strip all his own. Here comes Spooky the cat, drawn by that nuts & bolts specialist who also does Smokey Stover. And finally, Lichty's masterful Grin & Bear It comics are back in the Sunday funnies as well as in the daily.

Up to 34 Comics Each Sunday

The number of individual comics varies from issue to issue—in every Sunday paper. But The Post will be bringing you a lot more every Sunday—as many as 34 separate comic strips on many Sundays. That's more than any Washington Sunday paper has offered for years! Again it's true for Sunday comics, as for most things you look for in a newspaper—you get the best and the most in The Washington Post!

Newer! Bigger! Better!

There's a new name for this new Sunday Post comic section. We call it The Washington Post Comic Carnival. Get The Post this Sunday! Look over the Comic Carnival for yourself! You'll see that it's full of new comics, and you'll find it a lot bigger and a lot better. Remember—from now on, for Sunday funnies it's the Sunday Post!

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BILL VEECK IS spicing baseball's off-season with a couple of gratuitous cracks at the Yankees, one of the clubs his Indians have to beat, and if it is a feud in the making, I think we ought to stand up and cheer.

POVICH

For too long the big league club owners have been painfully discreet in their comments, and the off-season reading has been pretty boring. But now along comes Veeck to chide the Yankees for firing Bucky Harris as manager by calling him "one of the top three managers in the big leagues," and promptly signing him to boss Cleveland's Coast League farm team at San Diego.

Harris will be back in the majors before long and will "make the Yankee executives who fired him eat their words," Veeck predicted. If that doesn't set well with his fellow magnates at New York, Veeck doesn't appear to care, and he emphasized everything by declaring his own Indians would repeat their pennant triumph in 1949, this time by 10 games.

And if that crack wasn't enough to get Veeck into the papers, his next one was. That's when he said that Steve Gromek, his fourth-ranking pitcher of last year, would top such as Gene Bearden, Bob Feller and Bob Lemon next season.

WHEN HE HIRED HARRIS for the San Diego job, Veeck demonstrated that he is a forgiving sort, incidentally it was Harris who led the tirades against the Cleveland club and Bob Feller last summer when Feller pulled out of the All-Star game, and he didn't spare Veeck for his part in the run-out. But when Veeck needed a man for his top farm club, he proffered the job to Harris quickly.

Veeck never was much disturbed by criticism. He laughed it off when The Sporting News lit into his hide for signing Satchel Paige purely on his box-office appeal, and was content to watch Publisher Taylor Spink eat his words when Paige proved the pitching find of the season. He'd have traded away Manager Lou Boudreau to the Browns a year ago despite the anguished howls of Cleveland fans, if the Browns hadn't pulled out of the deal.

The only item which apparently has disturbed Veeck in his presidency of the Indians is the widespread report that Vice President Hank Greenberg owns as much or more stock in the club than Veeck himself. On that topic, Veeck goes loud and announces petulantly, "I own the most stock."

VEECK ISN'T close to owning a controlling interest in the Indians, but that fact doesn't handicap his operations as president of the club with full authority. He cannily set up what is known as a voting trust for himself on a long-term basis when his group bought the Indians from Alva Bradley and he is as much in the saddle as Tom Yawkey at Boston or Connie Mack at Philadelphia or Clark Griffith in Washington.

His boast that the Indians will win the pennant by 10 games may not be an idle one at that. Certainly his Cleveland club stacks up as the best in the league again and the second-place Red Sox made no move during the winter to improve their own fortunes. The chief trading activity of the Red Sox at the Chicago meeting was the unconditional release of 40-year-old Wally Moses.

The Yankees, aside from buying Pitcher Fred Sanford, a 21-game loser with the Browns, didn't bolster their chances much, either, and there is apparently nothing else in the league to challenge Cleveland. And if Bob Feller had not let the Indians down for two-thirds of the season, the Indians might well have won the 1948 pennant by 10 games.

CONNIE MACK vouchsafed the other day that Cleveland would make a runaway of the 1949 pennant race. "They have the best catcher in baseball in Jim Hegan," he said, "and Lemon, Bearden, Gromek and Feller are four of the finest pitchers in the league. Mickey Vernon is the best first baseman, and the rest of their infield—Gordon, Boudreau and Keltner are far out in front."

Mack had special tribute for Dale Mitchell and Larry Doby, the Indians' outfielders. It was far more than faint praise. Of Mitchell, he said, "he is second only to Ted Williams among the left fielders" and of Doby he added, "that fellow is only a step behind Joe DiMaggio in center field.

When spring training opened in 1948, the Yankees and Red Sox were so closely rated they were co-favorites to win the pennant, but the betting commissioners will not be so indecisive next spring. There's no other club in Cleveland's class, on paper at least, and Veeck's boast that his Indians will run away with it could be precisely correct.

Big 9 Official Says

Cain Puts Berwanger on Spot In Disputed Rose Bowl Play

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP).—Field Judge Jay Berwanger, who ruled the score on Northwestern's controversial "fumbled" touchdown in the Rose Bowl game, was "put on the spot" by Referee Jimmy Cain.

So says Jim Masker, supervison of Big Nine officials, who claimed today that "the calling of a touchdown is the prime responsibility of the referee."

Cain and Headlinesman James W. Hole were the game officials assigned by the Pacific Coast Conference and Berwanger and Umpire Ernie Vick were delegated by the Big Nine.

"At appears to me that Cain shifted his own responsibility onto Berwanger," said Masker, who retired as a referee in 1943 after 40 years of whistle-blowing.

"It's up to the official in the best position to report his observation on a touchdown play, by nod or some other sign, but the decision on whether it is a score rests solely with the referee.

"Cain could have said one of the other officials called it that way without specifically putting Berwanger on the spot—if, as Cain says, Berwanger was in the best position to see Art MuraKowski's one-yard plunge."

Masker said that neither Berwanger nor Vick would report to his office on the Pasadena game, as is customary after a Big Nine game. "Perhaps, however, some report will be made to the Pacific Conference," said Masker.

Berwanger, Masker said, planned to spend a few days visiting friends in San Francisco before returning to Chicago.

"The camera is tricky on goal-line plays," Masker continued. "Movies usually are taken at a bad angle on touchdowns and still shots may be snapped a second before or after the farthest advance of a ball carrier."

Plane Carrying Football Squad Is Forced Down

Walnut Ridge, Ark., Jan. 3 (AP).—A chartered plane bearing Missouri Valley footballers homeward was forced down near here tonight by storms attending a series of tornadoes across Arkansas, Kansas and Louisiana.

The players were en route to Kansas City from Tampa, Fla., where they played in Saturday night's Cigar Bowl game with St. Thomas.

Business Manager E. L. Parsons said one plane loaded with 22 players and five of their wives landed at a former Army air field here. The group will continue on to Kansas City by train, he said, and expect to arrive at approximately 8 a. m. Tuesday morning.

Parsons said two planes left Tampa today with the team members. He said he had no information concerning the first plane, which left Tampa about an hour before the second took off.

The second plane landed early tonight at Clambert-St. Louis Airport at St. Louis. Those aboard were exxpected to continue their trip to Marsall, Mo., by train, as a steady rain was falling over the St. Louis area.

NCAA Plans For Limit on Bowl Games

By Stan Opotowsky

New Orleans, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—The National Collegiate Athletic Association is almost certain to crack down on football bowl games, either banning them completely or limiting the number to four or five, it was learned today from a responsible source.

The source, close to the NCAA's three-man bowl committee, said action probably will come at this year's convention which begins Wednesday in San Francisco.

This source, who insisted that he not be identified because of his key position in college athletics, said:

"There were about 50 bowls played this season. One school (Hardin-Simmons) played in as many as three bowl games.

"We know that has to stop.

Committee Investigates

"During the past year, a three-man NCAA committee, composed of Commissioner Victor Schmidt of the Pacific Coast Conference, Commissioner Bernie Moore of the Southeastern Conference and Tulane Athletic Director Horace Renegar, has compiled information on every bowl game to present to the convention.

"This information includes the amount of money earned or lost by the bowls and what happens to this money. The method of selecting bowl teams also will be scrutinized."

The source, who has worked with the committee, says two probable courses are open to the NCAA:

1. Ban bowls completely.

2. Limit post-season games to bowls established before 1936. This would sanction only the big four—the Rose Bowl, the Sugar Bowl, the Cotton Bowl and the Orange Bowl.

"There is a chance that we also might have to approve a bowl for the smaller colleges—something like the Little Rose Bowl," he said.

Most bowl committees realize that the NCAA will consider halting the increase in postseason games and will lobby at the convention. The Sugar Bowl, for example, has presented Moore with a letter outlining its policies and financial organization. This will be put before the convention.

Some Restrictions Now

Some conferences already have restrictions. The Western and Pacific Coast Conferences limit participation to the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, although the Pacific Coast group made an exception this year in the case of Oregon. Oregon, which shared the league championship with California, was permitted to play in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas.

The Southeastern Conference, which formerly limited its group to the Big Four bowls—Rose, Sugar, Orange and Cotton—revised its rules this year. A Southeastern team must have at least a .750 conference average to qualify and cannot go to a bowl two years in a row.

The Southwest discourages minor bowl appearances for its members by requiring an honored team to kick in with $25,000 or a percentage of the gate receipts, whichever is greater.

Terp Officials Will Attend Coast Meeting

Three University of Maryland officials will attend the annual NCAA football coaches conference in San Francisco this week-end.

They are Dr. H. C. Byrd, president; Jim Tatum, athletic director and football coach, and Geary Eppley, newly-elected president of the Southern Conference

Tatum is reported to be interested in lining up some Western football opponents for the Terps. One spot is still open on the 10-game 1949 schedule, which has not been fully released. Maryland already has listed one team on this fall's program in Michigan State.

Becker, Schwartz Win Wrestling at Uline's

George Becker and partner Red Schwartz got the best of meanies George Lenihan and Killer Karl Davis in the team match of last night's wrestling show at Uline Arena.

Davis and Lenihan were proclaimed losers when they kicked their innocent opponents out of the ring and wouldn't let them back in. Orchid Skaaland mangled Tony Martinelli into submission with the approval of the 750 customers.

Boxing-Video Controversy May Come to Head This Month

By Murray Rose

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—The boxing-television controversy over the effects of video on fight gates may come to a head this month when three bettter than fair shows will be presented in Madison Square Garden.

"The rise in the cost of living undoubtedly has hurt sport gates all over, Harry Markson, managing director of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, said. "The money, as everyone who reads the papers knows, isn't around like it used to be. Now television brings in some customers even if it keeps some away. How much either way no one knows. It's too early yet to tell what effect video has on the whole situation."

The managers agree that "the dough ain't around like it used to be," but disagree entirely with Markson on video.

They say loudly and heatedly that it murders the gate of the fight being televised. They say it doesn't pay enough. Main go fighters get around $225 each for Garden shows while the prelim boys don't cut in at all.

And what's more, they declare, viedo is ruining the smaller clubs within reach of the stations televising big-time fight shows.

If the gates continue to droop, there may be fireworks, especially from the managers.

The Twentieth Century Sporting Club completed its January program for the Garden by signing Lightweight Champion Ike Williams and Welter Contender Kid Gavilan of Cuba for a 10-round nontitle fight, January 28. This fight will have an important bearing on the weltear title should Champion Ray Robinson give up his crown.

Friday there is a 10-round middleweight clash between Robert Villemain, unbeaten French 158-pounder, and Steve Belloise, hard-hitting Bronx contender.

For January 14, Markson has lined up three of the most promising youngsters in the business, Welterweight Vince Foster of Omaha; Lightweight Arthur King of Toronto and Heavyweight Roland La Starza of New York.

North Carolina Held to 55-47 By Maryland

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 3.—North Carolina won its seventh straight victory of the young basketball season tonight by defeating Maryland University, 55 to 47.

But the victory, North Carolina's first in the Southern Conference championship race, was anything but an easy one as the Terps made a hard fight all of the way before 4000 spectators.

At the end of the half, North Carolina led by only 26-24. Early in the second half, Maryland tied the score at 29-29.

With 10 minutes of playing time left, North Carolina had pulled away to an eight-point lead and held that margin to the end.

Hugo Kappler and Coy Carson paced North Carolina's scoring with 15 and 14 points, respectively, while Spence Wright, Bob Murray and Bernie Smith each made 9 points for Maryland.

Morales Beats Morgal in Lively Bout

By Sy Fishbein

Ginger and spice and everything but excessive boxing skill was in evidence at Turner's Arena last night as the 1949 Golden Gloves got under way before a crowd of 956 easily-aroused spectators.

A host of fledgling pugilists flailed at each other eagerly but often wildly in the novice eliminations. In the most spirited bout of the evening, a pair of 126-pounders, Arthur Morales of Andrews Field and Ted Morgal of the Olympic Club gored each other profusely.

Morales, wearing a fierce, hungry look and tense, rigid stance, got in often enough to drop his rangy opponent in the first and third round, and was awarded the unanimous decision.

A powerful two-fisted assault by 135-pound Quantico Leatherneck Reuben Aguilar gained him a technical knockout over Al Jarrett of Barry Post after two clean knockdowns, in another one of the better fights.

The Quantico Marine delegation was vigorously represented both in talent and lung-power. The Marines sent three candidates into the ring and all came through with victories, two of them by knockouts.

Scores Running High in Open

Los Angeles, Jan. 3 (AP).—Temperatures which didn't exceed 51 and high winds played havoc today with scores in 36-hole qualifying play for the 23rd Los Angeles Open golf tournament which starts Friday.

The lowest complete 36-hole qualifying score reported by late afternoon was 71-73—144, by Ralph Wolf, Los Angeles amateur. Dale Andreason, Chicago, had a sparkling 68 first round. Amateur Johnny Dawson, Los Angeles, soared to 81 in his first round. Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, became a tournament casualty before he ever arrived. He telegraphed that his train was delayed

Garden Twin Bills Average 16,000 to Date

By Joe Reichler

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Ned Irish, basketball impersario at Madison Square Garden, today brought out figures to show that attendance at the huge New York arena this season is holding its own with last year's record-breaking totals.

In contrast to turnouts over the rest of the country, the Garden already has had a half dozen sell-outs, and has average around 16,000 spectators for the first 13 doubleheaders.

That average is expected to hold up nicely in this week's pair of doubleheaders. Opening hostilities tomorrow will be a program listing George Washington University of Washington, D. C., against Manhattan, and St. John's of Brooklyn against City College of New York.

All four of these clubs have been defeated but Manhattan owns the best record, having lost only once in seven starts. It opposed a Colonial five which has won four games and lost two.

"The past week has been the biggest week in history at Madison Square Garden, as far as basketball is concerned," Irish announced at the weekly luncheon of the Metropolitan Basketball Writers' Association.

"We had five nights of college basketball last week and one matinee professional game," he said, "and drew 91,330 spectators. A year ago, when we set all sorts of attendance records, we drew 82,836 fans for five nights."

Colonials' Fourth Garden Appearance

George Washington University's appearance in Madison Square Garden tonight against Manhattan will be its fourth since the Garden bills were inaugurated. The Colonials have never won a game, their last attempt ending in a 3-point loss to St. John's in 1941. Previously they had lost to Long Island and C. C. N. Y.

Five of the first seven men on GW's squad, plus Coach George Garber, will be appearing before home folk. Natives of the New York area are Bill Cantwell, Dave Shapiro, Phil McNiff, Ace Adler and Lenny Small.

Bud Wilkinson Offered $15,000 For Five Years

Norman, Okla., Jan. 3 (AP).—Dr. George Cross, president of the University of Oklahoma, said tonight Football Coach Bud Wilkinson had been offered a five-year contract at $15,000 a year.

The offer included a separate agreement hiring the young Minnesota-trained gridiron tutor as the university's athletic director. Dr. Cross said the offer was made orally in mid-December "with the tentative aproval of the State board of regents—expected to meet in about two weeks to take formal action."

His present contract at $11,000 annually has two more years to go. Wilkinson's name has been mentioned frequently the past few days in connection with a vacancy in the football coaching staff at Wisconsin.

Football Not Included in Expanded Program

By Herb Heft

Plans for construction of a concrete stadium seating 20,000, a multi-sports fieldhouse, tennis courts and a new baseball field were announced yesterday by President Paul F. Douglass of American University.

The move is coincident with a new emphasis on varsity track, baseball, basketball and soccer at American.

"Some time in the future, we may even go into football," said Douglass, who has been an outspoken foe of "professionalism" in college football.

"However, as long as Maryland, George Washington and Georgetown continue to field fine teams and we feel that we can't compete in their class, we won't have football here at American," he added.

"Meanwhile, our new stadium will accommodate our intra-mural activities, and we also hope it will serve the community." Douglass said. "It will certainly give us the finest athletic plant in the area."

Work Begins in Few Weeks

The stadium will be located off University ave. nw., east of Wesley Circle.

Drainage and sodding on the new track, which will rim the stadium, and the separate baseball field, will begin within a few weeks. Architectural plans were drawn by Charles Goodman.

The stadium is expected to be ready in about 18 months. It will be shaped like a horseshoe and be designed to accommodate soccer and field hockey in addition to track and football.

The track will be a quarter of a mile oval and will have a 220-yard straightaway. It will be the most modern in the area.

The tennis courts will be adjacent to the stadium.

The first and third-base lines of the baseball field will be lined by two sets of bleachers, each seating 500. The outfield will be framed by a fence 400 feet from home plate down both foul lines.

Fieldhouse One Of Best

Work on the field house is last on the program. It will be one of the most complete in the East. Its basketball court will be surrounded by 4500 seats. It will have a swimming pool, bowling alleys, badminton, squash and handball courts, a boxing and wrestling ring, an indoor baseball field, and even a driving range for the golf team.

American U. Athletic Director Staff Cassell said that the new project would enable the school to place new emphasis on track. "In the past we've had to borrow the tracks of the high schools in order to practice and we haven't been too successful," he said.

Cassell also said that the present gym would be retained and kept for the newly emphasized intramural sports program.

"The old baseball field will be used for a varsity soccer team which we hope to field next year. That sport has been a minor one up to now," Cassell said, "but we have 22 promising prospects practicing now and we're going major next year."

In Case You Drew Conclusions—

Ugly A. C.'s Confusing Name Has Nothing On Founder, Who Started With Wrong Shot

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

DON'T GET THE WRONG idea about that name you see in the local sports pages from time to time—Ugly A. C.

Members of the Ugly Athletic Club basketball team are no more homely—or handsome—than those of any other club in town. It's just that they go under the nickname of their organizer, Morton (Ugly) Littman, who isn't ugly either.

Confused?

Well, Ugly Littman can get you that way. His nickname, he says, was hung on him 18 years ago by a playgrounds instructor—"probably because I didn't keep my hair combed very well."

Ugly didn't stop with organizing the Ugly A. C., which isn't, and giving it his name. He's a manager-player, too, and in the other time he can spare from his father's paint store he does publicity for both Ugly and the A. C.

"What I'd like most," says the former Tech High and High Point (N. C.) College athlete, "is to catch on in organized baseball. This basketball is just a gag—keeps the guys together in the cold months. Baseball is my game, but I've retired from it for a while until somebody makes me an offer."

Ugly says he'd be willing to take a job at scouting, managing or even coaching a minor league club. He doesn't expect to play in organized baseball because his other duties would be too heavy. But he doesn't run down his own playing ability.

MORTON (UGLY) LITTMAN

Ugly's first real mention on the sports pages came in 1938 as he performed with Tech's basketball forces. In a crucial game he took aim for a long shot and fortunately missed. He was shooting at the wrong goal.

Since then Ugh, as his friends have contracted his nickname, has managed such sandlot baseball teams as Jacobsen Florists, J. C. Flood, Coffey Screen Co., Corr Bicycle Shop, and such basketball teams as Naiman Photos and Jacobsen.

He even managed a fighter once—Middleweight Danny Rosati—but quit cold on that activity when his boy, carrying a large Littman wager, was soundly thrashed.

Ugly's present A. C., which plays independent basketball on weekdays and in the Jewish Community Center League on Sunday, is made up of athletic friends from his high school days. There's Bozie Matera and George Pigott from Eastern, Eli Blank and Moe Tannenbaum from Tech, Jumbo Pearlman from Roosevelt and Aaron Silverman and Jim Mandes from Central.

It's the only team in the Sunday league without uniforms. Ugly paid the $10 for a franchise himself, but expects to get some of it back from his players "when I get around to it."

But the Ugly A. C. has lost only once in six games. Its leader may be a character and its name misleading, but it must know how to play basketball.

Hack Wilson Monument Fund Lags

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 3.—A local campaign launched here three weeks ago to raise money for a monument to the late Hack Wilson has met with a disappointing response.

Edward Dockeney, treasurer of the committee in charge of the campaign, said today that little more than half of the $3000 needed has been received and that a plan to canvass baseball for the rest has been adopted.

The committee is sending form letters to officials of teams in both major leagues and of minor league teams on which Wilson played, asking for financial support.

The monument will be erected at Rosedale Cemetery where the late slugger lies buried. Wilson died a few months ago in a Baltimore hospital and was brought to Martinsburg for burial.

He began his brilliant baseball career with Martinsburg of the Blue Ridge League in 1921, and though he played here only two years, considered this city his home throughout his playing days.

Hack played some ball with Portsmouth, Va., and with the New York Giants before moving on to the Chicago Cubs where his fence-busting feats built up records which still stand on the National League books.

Bowling Hereabouts

BROOKLAND BOWLING Alleys yesterday were assigned the big City-Wide tournament by the Washington City Duckpin Association, President Kenny Beck announced to the Metropolitan Washington Bowling Operators at their monthly meeting at the Mayflower Hotel. The championships, in which thousands of bowlers and hundreds of teams compete, will open on March 21, and Beck is predicting a record turnout.

Hap Newman, popular manager of the Chevy Chase Ice Palace, is looking for some hot competition when his Tom's Auto Service team of the Men's Major District League collide with the New Haven All-Stars Friday night of this week at the Chevy mapleways, starting at 9 o'clock. There will be singles, doubles and team action, with all proceeds going to the Mile-O'-Dimes Infantile Paralysis Fund. Newman is chairman of the bowling committee for the drive.

Jack White, Ben Kosky, Bozo Denta, Charlie Kebert, Walt Krajewski, Mack Carboni and Herman Ferri will represent the invaders, while Howie Parsons, Nick Rinaldi, Joe Frecchi, Paul Jarman, Johnny Ressa and Moe Meade will bowl for Tom's.

The annual Sister Kenny Handicap benefit tournament will be held Sunday at Hyattsville Recreation Center, starting at 2 p. m.

Slump Laid To Conflict In Schedules

Baltimore, Jan. 3 (AP).—The State Racing Commission said the handle at Maryland mile tracks in 1948 was down almost 15 million dollars from the year before, and blamed competition with tracks outside the State.

In its annual report to Governor Lane ,the commission said the past year's intake at all tracks was $80,553,560, with $3,844,102 going to the State.

The half-mile tracks were down $500,000.

The Governor wa stold that "the avoidance of damaging conflicts . . . is becoming difficult if not impossible, with the increasing number of days of racing in neighboring States." The commission added that "each State must amake some concessions to the others."

Graw Situation Bad

Referring specifically to the situation at Havre de Grace, the report said a first-meeting conflict with the Garden State track at Camden, N. J., had ended by hurting both tracks, while the second Havre de Grace meeting, shifted to midsummer to avoid another conflict was even less successful.

The body warned that unless accord is reached, States may compete with one another and increase running days until "there will be more racing than is good for the welfare of the community." They said matters have already progressed to such a point in New England.

All the mile tracks—Pimlico, Bowie, Laurel and Havre de Grace—showed a dip. Pimlico, with the largest single handle, was off 16.77 while Havre de Grace fell 29.83 per cent.

Of the half-mile tracks, where betting amounts to less than one-sixth of mile track wagering, Timonium, Cumberland, and Hagerstown showed gains. Bel Air registered a slight drop, and Marlboro went down 13.5 per cent.

Dope Bans Outlined

The commission included in its report an explanation and defense of its new antistimulation system, which retains receiving barns but places responsibility for illegal stimulation on the trainer.

When Stuart S. Janney took over the commission chairmanship last August, he revised a system in force since 1946, under which the State accepted responsibility for doped horses.

Reviewing the first year of legal harness racing in the State, the group reported that the Laurel Raceway had been the only one of three authorized tracks which had its plant ready in time for the meet. It reaffirmed its intention to sanction a total of only 60 days of harness racing in Maryland, although 100 are permitted under law.

The report backed a request from the county fair associations, asking the General Assembly to lighten the present tax schedule, which the 1947 Legislature increased "almost 100 per cent" over the old excise.

CAPS' FRED SCOLARI IN TYPICAL ACTION SHOT

Against Bullets Tomorrow

Big Advance Sale Indicates Another Crowd Mark for Caps

The long lament from the Uline Arena counting rooms anent Washington's indifference to the Caps seems to have abted, and with good cause.

As of last night, more than 3000 tickets had been sold for Wednesday night's game between the Caps and the Baltimore Bullets, according to the Uline ticket managers.

Signs the Caps are not going to be lonely any more are even clearer when the figures are compared to the advance sale of 2000 for last Saturday's Chicago Stag game which drew the season's record crowd of 5135.

Meanwhile, the Caps learned last night they haven't seen the last of Jack Toomay, the center who was released last week to make room for Jack Nichols.

No longer a Cap, Toomay will play as a Bullet when the Baltimore aggregation comes breathing defiance into Uline Arena Wednesday night. Baltimore grabbed the 6-foot 7-inch pivot man after John Pelkington decided to retire.

Pelkington was obtained from the Fort Wayne Pistons in a trade for Leo Mogus.

The Bullets, just barely topping .500 in their campaign thus far, still haven't been able to work up much awe for the Caps. Player-Coach Buddy Jeanette, while he admits somewhat grudgingly that the Caps are a pretty strong outfit (they've won 23, lost 4), insists that breaks were mostly responsible for the two games the Caps have taken from Baltimore this year.

Jeannette will alternate Toomay with his young smoothie, Connie Simmons, and Walt Budko at the center spot, hoping that Toomay will respond in the tradition of former Caps.

The tradition has usually meant a good deal of trouble for Red Auerbach's boys. John Mahnken is the outstanding example. Mahnken, a rather listless performer for Auerbach last season, gets red hot against his former mates and was the main Jet when Indianapolis broke the Caps 15-game winning streak earlier this year.

The Caps, however, can hardly complain. For Mahnken, they got Kleggie Hermsen and Toomay's replacement, Jack Nichols, has already proved himself after just three days with the team.

Nichols, a backboard hog in his debut against the Stags Saturday night, was razor sharp in a workout with the team yesterday. It'll be Nichols' job to keep the Caps' backboard game at its peak while Hermsen is catching his breath.

High Champs Begin Title Races Today

Armstrong Tech and Central open defense of their respective interhight basketball championships this afternoon.

Armstrong, after its sixth straight Negro public high title, clashes with Dunbar in the second game of a league double-header at the National Guard Armory. In the 3:30 p. m. curtain-raiser, Cardoza meets Phelps Vocational.

Central, favored to cop its second straight crown in the white Interhigh league, is host to Bell Vocational, which makes its loop debut in the 3:30 p. m. game. Chamberlain, another new league entry, bows against Anacostia, also at 3:30.

The rest of the white interhigh teams go into action Friday in afternoon and evening double-headers at the Armory.

That night's doubit-header, pitting Western against Anacostia, and Roosevelt against Eastern, is one of the most important for the schools. It's one of only two night dates allotted them by the Armory, and the schools are hoping that enough adults will take advantage of the 7:30 p. m. starting time to give the league a financial boost.

Five veterans of last year's titular team seem to cement Armstrong's hold on the Negro league title for at least another season. Two of them, Gene Lawrence and Jay Peterson, both well over 6 feet tall, were among the league's top scorers. They'll get a heavy assist from Dee Morgan, Charlie Matthews and Leon Jackson.

Armstrong has won three of its four nonleague games, two of the victories coming during a tour of North Carolina.

Jimmy Pantos, one of the finest all-around athletes in the area, is back to spark a Central team which has height, experience and scoring punch.

Bill Dunker, Franny Gleason, Jack Stringer, Ivan Shefferman and George Berman, each a member of last year's championship squad, and standing over 6 foot, 2 inches, will give Pantos lots of help in the scoring column.

The Cincinnatti Story . . .

Walters Will Be a 'Nice Guy' As Long as Players Let Him

Philadelphia, Jan. 3 (AP).—Bucky Walters, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, plans to remain a "nice guy" in the dugout during the 1949 baseball season—but woe betide any players "who ask for it."

Ever since Walters entered organized baseball 20 years ago, he's been considered one of the "nice guys," of the game. And when he was named during the 1948 season to take over the managerial reins of the Reds, some baseball experts thought he wouldn't be "tough" enough to make the grade.

Bucky can't agree with those who think a manager must be a whit-cracking slave driver to succeed.

"I don't see what being a nice guy or being a tough guy has to do with managing. Every player reacts differently. Some fellows do their best with a pat on the back. Other fellows have to be handled roughly."

Walters, who became a pitching star after starting in the majors as a third baseman, recalled the 14 managers under whom he played in his baseball career.

"Some were successful," he said, "others were so-so and still others just didn't have the material to win.

"Each had his own methods. But from my point of view most of them were 'nice guys'—at least they were nice to me. I'll get tough with players who ask for it the same as the managers I played for did."

Walters doesn't plan to turn into a shouting taskmaster to gain his end, however. When he does "get tough" with a player, he said, "No one but the player and I will know about it."

Nor does Bucky plan to establish a long list of rules and regulations for his charges.

"I won't hire house detectives or put a watch on my players," he said. "I'll have a midnight curfew the same as other managers. If a player violates it, he will be punished. If he continues to run things his way, he'll head back to the minors."

O'Brien Sinks Winning Shot

Four games were played last night in the Boys Club of Washington basketball tournament held at the Eastern Branch Boys Club gym.

In the 150-pound semi-finals, Billy McFarland paced the No. 5 Police Boys Club to a 78-37 victory over the Georgetown Branch with 27 points. The Eastern Branch defeated Georgetown, 60-52, with Billy Smelling and Mum Utley high scorers, each with 10 points.

The 80-pound class finals were climaxed when Billy O'Brien scored the winning point for the Eastern Branch Boys Club by a free throw after the game was over. Final score was Eastern 38, Alexandria Boys Club 37. In the 120-pound finals, Merrick Boys Club defeated the Georgetown Branch, 52-44. High scorer for the Merrick Club was Buz Brown with 19 pts.

Today's schedule of championship games:

90-pound class: Eastern versus No. 10 Police Boys Club.

105-pound class: Eastern versus Georgetown.

135-pound class: Eastern versus Alexandria.

150-pound class: No. 5 Police Boys Club versus Eastern.

Football Yankees Sign Three Stars Of Bowl Games

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—The New York Yankees of the All-America Football Conference today announced the signing of Fullback Tom Landry of Texas, Halfback Jerry Williams of Washington State and Guard Ken Sinofsky of Nevada.

Landry, whose National League draft rights were held by the New York Giants, scored the second touchdown for Texas against Georgia in the Orange Bowl Saturday.

Williams played for the West All-Stars, scoring the first West touchdown in the East-West game at San Francisco. Sinofsky, picked by the Los Angeles Rams in the National League draft, played for Nevada in the Harbor Bowl against Villanova.

Crescent Wins

The Crescent Cafe last night defeated Teehan's Grill, 45-36, in a Gordon Recreation Center League game at the Gordon Junior High School. Sonny Wesley was high scorer for the Crescent Cafe with 12 points. It was Crescent's eleventh win in 13 starts.

Nats' Al Evans Instructing at Baseball School

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 3 (AP).—The 12th annual Joe Stripp Baseball School opened here today with 96 students registered.

Stripp, former National League infielder and originator of the baseball school, said 110 students will take the course, including late arrivals.

The students on hand included 23 outfielders, 38 infielders, 25 pitchers and 10 catchers.

Bob Annenberg Heads South for Nat Tryout

Bob Annenberg, pitcher for Mount Rainier High last year, reports to the Washington Nats baseball school in Winter Gardens, Fla., for a tryout this Friday. The 6-foot 162-pound righthander, also played for the Mount Rainier team in the Prince Georges County League last summer.

Art Cook Breaks Another Rifle Record—His Own

The University of Maryland's deadly crack shot, Arthur Cook, broke his own Maryland Rifle League record last night when he shot 299 out of a possible 300 at the College Park range.

Cook, shooting for the Maryland varsity, which defeated National Capital No. 1, 1424 to 1399, had set the old record of 297 two years ago. For the Varsity it was the twenty-first consecutive victory in league competition.

In other matches, the 933 Rifle and Pistol Club defeated Greenbelt No. 2, 1373-1264, and National Capital No. 2 outshot the 163d M. P. Battalion team, 1311-1136. High woman nimrod was Audrey Blue of National Capital No. 1 with a score of 265.

Chevy Chase Routs W-L Alpha, 31 to 18

Chevy Chase Alpha, helped by Larry Barnes' 15 points, bested Washington-Lee Alpha, 31-18, last night in the second round of the Hi-Y Basketball League at the Boys' Y.

Montgomery-Blair nosed out Washington-Lee Beta, 20-18, in the second game.

What Are YOUR Chances If There Are No Profits?

We are delighted to extend permission to companies, associations, or individuals to quote from or reprint all or parts of these editorial messages, with or without credit mention.

This is the 71st of a series.

Since the November 2 election there has been a dazzling variety of plans to have the government do more and more things and spend more and more money. But there is almost no variety in the plans which are suggested to raise the money.

"Pay for it by taxing profits," is the standard refrain. Slap on an "excess" profits tax. Boost the corporations' income tax rate.

Well—why not? Haven't the corporations been making so much money that a big chunk of it can be turned over to the government spenders without hurting anybody?

The answer is no!

How high profits should be can be debated endlessly. Some people claim that 1948 corporation profits, which will amount to about $20 billion, are too high. They emphasize the fact that profits are larger in relation to investment than they were a few years ago. Other people think profits are low. They stress the fact that profits are not much larger in relation to sales than they have been historically. Both sides agree that in some individual cases profits have been too high, as in others they have been too low or non-existent.

But if we cut the total volume of profits drastically, we shall do so at our national peril.

There is no room for debate about that. For we shall choke off the crucially important job of building new plants and equipment for our industries. Squeeze hard enough, and America will go the way of Britain—down the long and painful skids of industrial decline. Widespread unemployment, especially among our industrial workers who produce new plants and equipment, will mark the dreary way. Here is a fact which the President, the Congress, the C.I.O., and all of us have a real reason to remember:

Almost two thirds of all profits today are going to rebuild and improve plants and equipment.

More than $13 billion of this year's profits are being plowed back. They are going—as a large proportion of profits have always gone—to buy for workers better tools to work with, better surroundings in which to work. They are making possible better products, and more of them, for all of us.

The figures below show how companies have put more and more profit-dollars and a larger share of their profits to work in the business:

YEAR	PROFITS REINVESTED	% OF TOTAL PROFITS
1929	$2.6 billion	31%
1939	1.2 "	24%
1943	5.9 "	57%
1944	5.2 "	53%
1945	4.2 "	47%
1946	6.9 "	55%
1947	11.2 "	62%
1948 est.	13.0 "	65%

The record shows that each of us is the real beneficiary of this plowing back of profits.

Every American has benefited from these profits because: Each dollar that business has put into its plants and equipment in the last thirty years has increased our yearly production by 35 cents.

This re-investment of profits has helped make possible a 75% increase in living standards since 1919.

It has helped increase wages from an average 48 cents an hour in 1919 to $1.36 today. Allowing for higher prices, that increase means that an hour's work today will buy twice as much as it did thirty years ago.

Why must business retain these billions of profits to improve its plants and equipment? Why must it plow back more and more? The reason is that business already is caught in a tax squeeze.

Federal taxes alone take at least thirty-eight of each one hundred dollars a company earns. Then, if the company pays out to its stockholders any part of what is left as dividends, the federal personal income taxes of the stockholders may take up to 77% of those dividends. Under these conditions, so few people are willing to invest in industry that the stock market is stagnant. Companies can not raise in that market the money they need for improvements.

The result: business must rely more and more on plowed-back profits to pay for new plants and equipment.

We know that everywhere in industry new and better ways of producing goods are standing ready for use. The previous editorial in this series mentioned some of them. We know, too, that depression and war put our industries far behind schedule—as much as $100 billion behind—in getting the new tools they should have had to keep themselves in first-class shape. McGraw-Hill is now completing a survey of industry that will measure these needs. The results will be published in this editorial series. We know already that in 1949 alone industry will need $18 billion or more for this purpose.

And all but a small fraction of that sum must come from profits.

Our prosperity, our strength as a nation, our hopes for better living depend on our continuing to generate and to plow back a large volume of profits.

For that reason we should not thoughtlessly follow those people who propose to pay for any and all new government activities by saying simply, "Soak the corporations." There is no need to follow them. There are other ways of obtaining necessary funds.

First and foremost should be economy within the government itself. If its citizens must pay still higher taxes, then surely government should exercise rigid self-restraint, cutting out all but the most essential activities and expenses.

After economy should come consideration of a broader federal tax base.

If these and other methods of raising money are inadequate and if taxes must take a bigger bite from business profits, two facts are clear. We should not adopt an "excess" profits tax with all of its complications and all of its corrupting effect on business. A moderate increase in the regular income tax on corporations is much less dangerous. But even such an increase, if necessary, should be accompanied by special allowances for expansion and depreciation that will encourage companies to continue spending their earnings for new plant and equipment. We all have a stake in that.

At this critical juncture in our history profits have a new and vastly more important role than they have ever had. In unprecedented degree they are the drive behind our present prosperity and the key to a better, stronger future.

Give profits the axe, and the blow does not stop there.

It cuts into the employment, the prosperity and the strength of our nation.

Everyone of us has a stake in how the President and Congress handle taxes on profits—and now is the time to remind them of that stake.

House Civil Service Committee Is Due for Membership Changes

REP. JOHN E. LYLE of Texas, a Democratic sparkplug on the House Civil Service Committee, is slated to be appointed to the Rules Committee. He has been indorsed for the key post by the Texas delegation. His leaving the Civil Service Committee will be a blow to Federal workers.

REP. GEORGE P. MILLER of California, is another crackerjack Democrat who may leave the committee. A former Federal worker himself, he's content to remain where he is but it's known that he's being considered for an assignment to what is regarded to be a more important committee.

REP. CHARLES W. VURSELL of Illinois, the No. 2 Republican on the committee, also may leave it. He's trying to decide whether to resign to take another post that has been offered to him.

REP. J. M. COMBS, another hard-hitting Texan, has been assigned to the Ways and Means Committee and he has his resignation in from the Cvil Service Committee.

Meantime, there's a move on to interest REPRESENTATIVE MITCHELL (D., Wash.) and half a dozen other Democratic members in the House Civil Service Committee. Mitchell is the son of President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission. A committee made up largely of new members is likely to mean a long delay before major employe legislation is acted on.

OSWALD RYAN will be nominated by the President to another six-year term on the Civil Aeronautics Board. He's the only original member who remains on the CAB. A Republican, he will continue as the CAB vice chairman.

SENATOR O'CONOR (D., Md.) is ready to introduce the bill that would raise the salaries of 200-odd Federal executives and give retroactive pay raises to this city's classified employes and to foreign service personnel. He will be joined in sponsoring the legislation by Senators Flanders (R., Vt.) and Baldwin (R., Conn.).

In the House, Representatives Davis (D., Ga.) and Miller (D., Calif.) put in bills to give the $330 pay raise to the 7500 classified District employes. Both measures would be retroactive to last July. House Majority Leader McCormack promised to support the District legislation.

The President will indorse the O'Conor measure in his budget message. But he must do more than that or the bill will be lost. The President must crack the whip—and soon—to get swift action on it. Here's why:

Several Democratic members of the Senate and House Civil Service Committees are talking openly—but not for publication—that they will oppose the bill unless the Administration promises a general pay raise for all other Federal workers. The President is reported to have informed his congressional leaders last week that the executive pay bill is "must" legislation.

FBI: Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.) wants it taken out from under the Justice Department and made an independent agency. He put in a bill yesterday to bring it about.

REPRESENTATIVE ED. REES of Kansas, the ranking GOP member of the House Civil Service Committee, put in two Federal worker bills yesterday which were: (1) To exempt the first $1440 of Civil Service pensions from Federal income taxes; and (2) to provide for a uniform administration of efficiency ratings in all Federal agencies.

VETERANS in the postal service would benefit under a bill sponsored by Miller of California. The measure would permit World War II veterans to count their time in the military service toward promotions in the Postoffice Department.

This bill, if approved, could raise the salaries of some veterans as much as $500 a year. The tens of thousands of veterans in the department would get a minimum of $100 each. Postal employes get automatic promotions of $100 a year during their first few years of service.

TREND? The Navy yesterday abolished 114 ungraded civilian jobs at Naval Academy and the Naval Post Graduate School at Annapolis. Actually, 99 persons were fired. The reason: lack of funds.

Several months ago the Navy gave pay raises that averaged about $1 a day to its per diem workers in Annapolis. In effect, yesterday layoff will help offset the cost of that raise. It's the Administration policy to force agencies to absorb the cost of pay raises when possible. But, now the unanswered question yesterday is: Will Navy make similar layoffs here.

BILLS: Miller of California, also dropped these bills on the hopper yesterday: A measure that would bring employes of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf here under the Civil Service retirement system; a bill to give postal employes 26 days of annual and 15 days of sick leave annually (they now get 15 and 10 days, respectively), and a third bill which would permit the Postoffice Department to set up a research and development division.

Firemen Fight $200,000 Silver Spring Fire

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

INSIDE BUILDING—Silver Spring volunteers strain to hold their line steady during fire early yesterday at the American Instrument Co. plant in Silver Spring.

Woman, 82, Perishes in Bedroom Fire

Firemen Find Her At Window, Burned Beyond Recognition

An 82-year-old woman was burned to death yesterday in a house where she had roomed for 15 years to be near her son, a patient in St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The woman, Mrs. Mary K. Young, apparently was trapped in her second-floor bedroom at 3009 8th st. se. by flames firemen believe came from a two-burner gas plate she used for making coffee. She was alone in the house when the fire was discovered shortly before 10 a. m. Her bedroom was so badly damaged before firemen put out the flames—they were unable to determine exactly how the blaze started. Smoke and water damaged the rest of the second floor.

Came from Pittsburgh

Mrs. Young came here from Pittsburgh 15 years ago to room in the home of Ernest Day, labor foreman for the Public Works Agency, and Mrs. Day, a block away from the hospital. She wanted to be near her son there. That son, and another in Pittsburgh, survive.

Mrs. Day said she was returning home from the grocery store when she saw smoke issuing from a second-floor window. Mrs. Young stood in the window, apparently seeking air and help, possibly blocked by the fire from escaping out of the room to the stairs. Mrs. Day shouted to her to save herself but got no response. Mrs. Day then ran into the house to rescue her roomer, but was halted on the stairway by smoke and flames.

Firemen Summoned

Mrs. Day ran outside and called for help. A neighbor telephoned for firemen, and a moment later, at 9:54 a. m., someone else sent in a box alarm. Engine Companies 8, 15, 18, 19 and 25 responded, under Battalion Chief A. M. Grunwell. Firemen dashed into the house with hose lines and soon had the flames extinguished, confining them mostly to Mrs. Young's middle bedroom and its ceiling. They found her body, burned beyond recognition, half-hanging over the bedroom window sill.

The body was taken to the Morgue, where Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of "accidental death due to universal fourth-degree burns." Authorities are trying to locate Mrs. Young's son in Pittsburgh.

FIRE IN CEILING—Fire in company's No. 6 plant, on 900 block of Selin rd., Silver Spring, was confined to the ceiling but damage to instruments ran into thousands of dollars. Here fireman directs stream of water during blaze.

Silver Spring Plant Blaze Being Probed

American Instrument Company Damages May Exceed $200,000

Silver Spring fire officials last night were investigating origin of a blaze which early yesterday caused damage which may exceed $200,000 in a plant of the American Instrument Co.

The fire was confined to the ceiling of the company's Plant No. 6, on the 900 block of Selin rd., Silver Spring, but hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of valuable testing equipment and precision machinery used to produce it were damaged by smoke and water.

Officials of the company said an accurate estimate would not be available until a complete inventory is completed.

The damaged building is a block and a half away from the company's main plant 8030 Georgia ave. The firm manufactures laboratory and scientific testing equipment for the armed forces, schools and universities as well as hospitals and private laboratories.

Most of the damage, the company spokesman said, was to completed and partially completed equipment, some of which was ready for delivery to the military services.

Damage to the building itself was estimated at $8000 by Silver Spring Fire Chief Charles Deffinbaugh. Although cause of the blaze has not been determined finally, Deffinbaugh said, it has been established that a watchman lighted a gas radiator in a room where the blaze originated about an hour before the alarm was received.

Firemen from two Silver Spring companies, called out at 12:35 a. m., had the flames under control in about two hours, and prevented the fire from spreading to two adjacent buildings.

Court Grants 4 Men Stays Of Execution

Four condemned men yesterday were granted stays of execution by District Court so that they can appeal their convictions to the Supreme Court and ask for executive clemency.

Granted stays were:

George A. Garner, 25, and his brother, Lawrence J. Garner, 23, convicted of fatally shooting Howard Jones, 37-year-old cab driver, in a $4 robbery last February 27. Their execution date was postponed from January 7 to February 25.

John H. Hall, 34, convicted of raping an 8-year-old girl on Kenilworth ter. ne., in October, 1946. His execution date, January 15, was stayed until February 18.

Theodore M. Holmes, 22, found guilty of raping a 9-year-old girl near the National Arboretum March 18. Slated for electrocution January 7, he received a stay until February 15.

False Report Charged

William O'Connell, 27, a National Press Building elevator operator, was fined $50 yesterday for falsely reporting to police that he was attacked by two men who Saturday night rifled the office of an attorney in the building.

The elevator man made the report to "get sympathy from his estranged wife," Judge John P. McMahon of Municipal Court was told.

Hall Will Go On Trial Today in Caldwell Slaying

Thomas Hall, 31-year-old Deanwood Park, Md., resident will go on trial today in Prince Georges County Circuit Court for murder in the fatal shooting last June 12 of County Police Pvt. Charles F. Caldwell.

Hall's daughter, Janie Leeta Hall, 20, also is charged with murder but will be tried later in another court jurisdiction. A three-judge panel of the Circuit Court will hear the trial, which will begin at 10 a. m. today at Upper Marlboro.

Hall and his daughter were indicted for murder and assault with intent to kill. The latter charge stemmed from the wounding of Pvt. Wallace L. Baker who with Private Caldwell had answered a call that a fight was in progress at the Hall home, 5312 Maple st., Deanwood Park.

Elks' Luncheon to Hear Talk on Gaming Tricks

Washington Lodge No. 15, B. P. O. E., will hold its first 1949 luncheon meeting Wednesday at 12:15 p. m., in the Antlers Room of the Elks Clubhouse, 919 H st. nw.

Dr. Ernest Blanche, statistician in the logistics division of the Office of the Chief of Staff of the Department of the Army, will demonstrate how "sharpers cheat at cards, dice and games of chance."

Grand Jury Indicts Perez For Murder

First Degree Count Returned in Slaying Of Wisconsin Man In District Hotel

Crispin B. Perez, 29, a bartender, was indicted yesterday for first-degree murder in the bludgeon-strangulation death of Charles J. Hines, 48, a retired painter, at the Ambassador Hotel.

According to the District grand jury, the motive was robbery of a $300 finger ring from Hines. On December 9, Hines was found dead and tied to his bed in the hotel room. He had been badly beaten with a blackjack and a handkerchief was stuffed in his mouth. Hines resided in Madison, Wis.

According to Perez's police confession, he "got crazy" after a night of drinking with Hines. Police said they recovered the ring from Perez' quarters at 1709 New Hampshire ave. nw., but have yet to find the blackjack.

Perez claimed that Hines began arguing, and started throwing punches, when Perez suddenly lost control of himself.

Max Zipkin, 53, a builder, of 3119 18th st. ne., was charged with violating the Mann Act and with having carnal relations with a girl of 12 years of age. According to the indictment, Zipkin took the girl from her home here for "debauchery and for other immoral purposes" to North Beach, Md., Philadelphia and Atlantic City. The dates of the offenses were between May, 1947, and April, 1948.

In another sex case, Willie H. Massey, 38, no known address, was charged with two rape counts, one on December 1 and the other on December 3.

Four men were indicted for burglary. They are George Williams, jr., 23, 419 K st. nw.; David Mitchell, 22, of 1316 6th st. nw., and William Briggs, 23, no known address, and Calvin C. Jackson, 22, of 1532 8th st. nw.

According to police, the gang were responsible for the burglaries of the B. F. Goodrich Co., 443 I st. nw; Seven Up, Inc., 1325 Kenilworth ave. ne.; Washington Woodworking Co., 912 4th st. nw.; a building at 59 Pierce st. ne.; a garage in the rear of 1314 9th st. nw.; Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., at 901 17th st. ne.; Briggs & Co., 3621 Benning rd. ne., and a building at 750 10th st. se.

Several thousands of dollars were stolen in the safecrackings.

Joseph Waldman, 3000 39th st. nw., was charged with fraudulently concealing assets in a bankrupcy proceeding October 21, 1941. He was then president of Jeans, Inc., it was said, and failed to disclose that he had 1070 ladies garments valued wholesale at more than $7000 and also $446 in money received from customers.

Jesse J. Wilkinson, jr., 34, of Norfolk, Va., was charged with fraud in obtaining a $104,000 steamboat, the S. S. Cavalier, from the Maritime Commission. According to the indictment, the terms of the purchase necessitated that the buyer be an American citizen. It was said that Wilkinson claimed he was buying the vessel for himself when really he was acting as agent for a maritime firm in Guadaloupe, French West Indies, and that the vessel was purchased to sail under the French flag.

Harold M. Kirkley, 30, of Willow Grove, Pa., a laborer, was charged with perjury. He was the winner of a $10,000 judgment in an accident suit here. He collected on the judgment, the grand jurors found, but it was subsequently learned that Kirkley lied in testifying, according to the indictment. He falsely claimed he was receiving certain medical treatment and was unable to obtain work, it was said.

Jury Charges Embezzling By Bondsman

The District Grand jury charged yesterday in an indictment that Gerald "Jerry" O'Day, veteran bondsman here, embezzled $1000 from a client.

O'Day, who is 50 and resides at the Harris Hotel, is a representative of the Peerless Casualty Co. and bonds suspected criminals pending court action.

The indictment, returned in three counts, in District Court, states that the money was taken from Bronislaus Matuszak alias Robert Melton. Matuszak was indicted in April on charges that he participated in the $7500 holdup of the Darby Printing Co. here. The case was subsequently dismissed against Matuszak.

Pending the trial, bond was set at $2000 for Matuszak. According to the charges, O'Day demanded $1000 cash as "indemnity" in addition to his five-per-cent premium and later refused to return the indemnity when the defendant was freed.

O'Day, who was contacted at his residence, declined to give an explanation of the charge, saying that the case was in the hands of his attorney.

The attorney, Charles E. Ford, declined to comment at the present time.

The court investigation of O'Day developed after Matuszak wrote a letter to Judge David A. Pine complaining of the bondsman's action. O'Day has offices listed at 602 5th st. nw.

Used Car Dealer Shoots Self, Then Calls Aid, Police Report

A used-car dealer shot himself twice in the chest yesterday, police said, then telephoned a friend to send an ambulance and was sitting calmly in his office when his friend and police arrived.

The dealer, Louis Bonbrest, 46, of 254 Portland st. se., operates a used-car lot at 2914 Nichols ave. se. Gallinger Hospital last night described his condition as "good" considering he missed his heart by 2 inches.

In three notes police said Bonbrest had written and placed on his desk, he said he was about $20,000 in debt and having financial difficulties. One note, to his bride of recent months, Mrs. Ruth Bonbrest, told of financial difficulties. The two others were addressed to police. One bore crossed out dates of December 16 and 22, indicating he had pondered self-destruction since before Christmas, and an unmarred date of December 28. The other was dated yesterday.

Police said the notes stressed that Bonbrest was about to shoot himself and did not want anyone else blamed for it.

Bonbrest operated a barber shop before leasing the used-car lot a year ago. The friend he called yesterday is Frank J. Hospidor, a retired policeman, of 636 Alabama ave. se. Hospidor said Bonbrest telephoned him at about 9:30 a. m., saying, "Get an ambulance for me. I've just shot myself."

Hospidor said he telephoned for police and an ambulance, then rushed to the used-car lot. He arrived about the same time police got there, to find Bonbrest sitting in a chair in his office, conscious and bleeding from chest wounds. A .25-caliber automatic lay on a desk near his hand.

"I have shot myself twice," Bonbrest said, according to police.

Lutheran Church Sister Found Dead in Fairfax School Bus

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Broadus T. Bunch, jr., 18, points to where body was found between the two rear seats on the left

Death in a Fairfax County school bus of a woman identified as a Baltimore Lutheran Sister was attributed last night to natural causes, possibly induced by exposure.

The frozen body of Sister Theodora Schmidt, 52, of the Lutheran Deaconess Motherhouse in Baltimore, was found wedged under the back seat of the empty school bus at 7:20 a. m. yesterday by the bus driver.

Alexandria police, who investigated, last night ruled out the possibility of foul play as result of the autopsy.

Alexandria City Coroner John Sims, who made the official determination of the death, declined to give out further details.

Her body was discovered by Driver Broadus T. Bunch, jr., 18, a student of the Mt. Vernon High School in Fairfax.

Bunch said he saw the dead woman's foot sticking into the bus aisle as he prepared to take the school bus on its usual rounds.

The vehicle had sat unused on the lot of the Apex Texaco Service Station, 2200 Duke st., Alexandria, since the evening of December 28, Bunch said, when he parked it for the Christmas holidays.

When found Sister Schmidt was dressed in a light blue cotton dress of the type worn at the Motherhouse, with a black coat and shoes. She carried a purse with about $15 in it, wore a cross pinned to her dress.

Photographs of friends were found on her body. She was identified by a scrap of paper bearing her name and address. The paper was pencilled with a list of Christmas presents for her friends.

At the Baltimore Motherhouse, a school to train young women for church service, the director, Sister Martha Hansen said Sister Schmidt had left the home Tuesday, saying she was going shopping.

When she did not return, friends assumed she had gone out of town on a visit, as she had often done before.

A native of Holland, Sister Schmidt came to the United States as a child, settling with her parents in Grand Rapids, Mich. She entered the Baltimore Motherhouse in 1918, graduated in 1920, and was assigned as parish deaconess at Reformation Lutheran Church, Baltimore.

In 1941, she returned to the Baltimore Motherhouse, where she helped supervise student work. She is survived by two brothers, the Rev. John Schmidt of Toledo, Ohio, and Carl Schmidt of Coopersville, Mich., and two sisters, Sophie, who lives in Grand Rapids, and another sister in Holland.

3 Area Builders Face Probe Of Irregular Practices in Deals

The names of three builders have been turned over to the Department of Justice for possible prosecution on charges of irregular practices in dealing with buyers, it was learned yesterday.

A spokesman for the Office of the Housing Expediter said the charges involved faulty construction or overcharges or omissions of part of specifications.

He would not divulge the names of the builders but said the sum involved in the alleged offenses was about $50,000. One of the builders is from Washington, another from Maryland and the third from Virginia.

Complaints lodged with the Housing expediter against 19 other builders from the three areas are currently under investigation, it was said.

Thus farm money and services valued at about $12,000 have been turned over to the complainants in these cases of a total of about $450,000 involved in the complainants.

Of the 19 accused builders, about six have been "interviewed" by officials of the compliance division of the office in efforts to arrive at amicable settlements involving refunds to buyers.

The accused are given two chances to appear for "interviews." Failure to appear for conference results in the matter being turned over to the Justice Department.

Art Gallery Gets Rid of Coal As Bucket Brigade Moves In

Not all visitors to the Corcoran Gallery of Art yesterday were lovers of art.

Some came with buckets, baskets, sacks and trucks to cart away nearly 20 tons of free coal. By nightfall, the gallery's coal bins were bare.

Gallery officials were happy. Since about 1930, Corcoran has been using Government steam for heating purposes and the coal that remained was just so much excess baggage. Recently fire underwriters insisted it be moved.

But you just don't set 20 tons of coal outside for the trash man. The coal was offered to several charitable agencies but there were hitches.

For one thing, the coal was of the buckwheat variety, the smallest grade of anthracite. It must be used with a blower. Also, it would have to be removed in small bucket loads through a manhole in the gallery court.

Finally, gallery officials offered the coal free—in any quantity—to anyone who would remove it. And the bucket brigade moved in yesterday.

Even though the coal was worth $230, Corcoran officials were most happy to be rid of it.

The public also obliged and carted off several tons of sand, a hangover from bomb-scare war days.

Report Issued on Operation Error

District Commissioner Guy Mason last night released a report by Glenn Dale Sanatorium officials on removal of the wrong ribs from a woman patient in an operation there last week.

Mason said he had directed Health Officer George C. Ruhland and his assistant, Daniel L. Seckinger, to recommend steps to prevent recurrence of such an error. After receiving such a report, Commissioner Mason said he would act on the incident.

In yesterday's report, Dr. Frank S. Ashburn, thoracic surgeon and consultant at Glenn Dale, who performed the operation, and Dr. James S. Conant of the Glenn Dale staff said they had been aware it was a left-side case but had inadvertently worked on the right side.

Thus far, the patient, who was operated on last Tuesday, is recovering from the operation, although she still is in serious condition, Dr. Daniel L. Finucaine, Glenn Dale superintendent, said he anticipated a "satisfactory recovery."

D. C. Urged To Buy Snow Removal Equipment

$500,000 Outlay Over 5 Years Is Proposed, Plus Increase for Labor

A five-year $500,000 program to purchase snow and ice removal equipment was recommended to the Commissioners last night by the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board.

Some 218 additional plows, loaders and mechanical sanders are needed to supplement 190 pieces of equipment available today, the board said, warning that snow-clogged streets "could be disastrous."

This recommendation highlighted a committee report indorsed last night by the whole board, and approved verbally by William A. Xanten, District sanitation superintendent. The board met at the Municipal Center.

Study Covers 50 Years

The report, based on a study of 50-year snowfall here, also urged that $125,000 be appropriated yearly for snow and ice removal, exclusive of equipment purchases. Since 1942, the report said, $45,000 has been appropriated each year, bearing "no relation whatever to the actual cost of such work.

At least double the present snow removal personnel also was urged. Advice by Xanten that more laborers be hired from private contractors and less reliance by placed on the limited refuse control staff led the board to authorize a further study of such administrative problems by its special committee.

"The District is far more dependent on automotive transportation than are most cities of its size and snow-clogged streets under present-day traffic conditions could be disastrous," the report found. "The total of losses accumulating from a single days' street tie-up in Washington . . . would far exceed any reasonable expenditure for snow and ice control."

Would Separate Powers

The board also adopted "a statement of principles" calling for separation of the powers to suspend or revoke autoists' permits and then to hear appeals. Both powers are now lodged in the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators Permits.

Approved by the advisory board were proposals which would serve as a basis for further discussion by the corporation counsel, the traffic director, the revocation board and representatives of the advisory group. The proposals suggest:

A hearing be held by a hearing officer appointed by Traffic Director George E. Keneipp prior to suspension or revocation of a driver's permit. The hearing officer would be barred from participating in review of his findings and the permit-holder informed of his right to review.

New Driver Permit Exams in Effect

New written examination for applications for District drivers' permits go into effect today. Wallace Braun, deputy traffic director, said last night at a meeting of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board.

The questions on the new exam are reduced from 20 to 12 and simplified for clarity, Braun said.

They were prepared, he said, with assistance of Dr. Winfred Overholser, psychiatrist and head of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Woman Injured As Cabs Crash

Mrs. May L. Taylor, 69, of 1638 R st. nw., suffered a broken right arm and shock, police said, when two taxicabs collided about 11 a. m. yesterday on M st. near Connecticut ave.

Mrs. Taylor, widow of Mylon L. Taylor, was riding in a cab driven by Walter C. Furr, 32, of 429 Kenyon st. nw., according to police, when it collided with the rear of another taxicab operated by Steve Matalik, 23, of 1206 10th st. nw. Police said Matalik reported he had been forced to make a sudden stop by the car in front of him.

Dousing in Water Eases Acid Burns

A thorough dousing in ice-cold water by a fellow employe probably saved a 28-year-old glass worker from serious acid burns yesterday after a carboy of sulfuric acid slipped from his hands, splashing his face and chest.

Warren Parker, 943 K st. nw., an employe of the C. J. Hawkins Glass Co., 1216 North Capitol st., was pouring the acid into a pitcher over a wooden trough when the carboy slipped from his grasp. The acid splashed on his face, chest and arms.

Hawkins who witnessed the accident from his office shouted to Parker's fellow worker, Hosea Aleman, 23, of 2804 14th st. nw., to pour water on him. Aleman drenched Parker with a bucket of water and then turned a hose on him.

Parker was admitted to Casulty Hospital for treatment of second degree burns and was reported to be in good condition last night.

Ryan Gets VFW Post

Daniel J. Ryan, past commander o the National Capital Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, last night was elected junior vice commander of the District department.

At a meeting held in the District Building, 14th and E sts. nw., Ryan was elected to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of senior vice commander, Robert E. Sargent. William D. Porter, former junior vice commander, was raised to the post vacated by Sargent.

$10,000 Asked in Suit

A court suit for $10,000 in damages, growing out of the death of Ernest Dorsey, 44, one of four persons killed in the collapse of the Empire Building here, has been filed against the District Government, Nick Papanicolas, building owner, and M. Cladny Construction Co.

The papers were filed by Ernest F. Dorsey, administrator for the victim's esta'e. Assistant Corporation Counsel William S. Cheatham is studying the case for the District Government.

Boy, 12, Shoots Grandparents, 1 Dead, Other Hurt

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 3 (AP).—A sandy-haired, freckle-faced 12-year-old boy killed his grandmother and wounded his grandfather at their home here tonight by firing five bullets into the bedroom where they were asleep, Roanoke Detective Lieut. E. A. Griggs said.

Mrs. H. T. Neece, 1305 Sixth st. se., was killed almost instantly in the rain of bullets. Her husband, a Norfolk and Western Railway shop employe, was struck in the arm and leg.

Detective Griggs said the youngster, Robert Thomas Neece, admits firing the shots after brooding over a whipping he received from his grandmother Saturday because he "tracked up" the kitchen.

The elderly couple, both of whom are 61 years old, had kept the youngster since he was a baby. His parents are divorced, police said.

"I didn't mean to shoot him," the youngster said in mumbling how he planned to kill his grandmother after she whipped him, Detective Griggs said.

MRS. LUCILLE STREETS
Tests a lot of oxygen equipment

By Harman W. Nichols
United Press Staff Correspondent

You walk into Room 124 of the Materials Testing Building at the National Bureau of Standards and you are a little startled.

There you see test tubes, huge gray tanks, complicated instruments and racks of screw drivers and monkey wrenches, plus a beautiful blonde in a smart gray business suit and white sleezy blouse. You think it is incongruity at its most interesting. It is!

The young lady is Mrs. Lucille Streets (5 feet 6; aged 26, and shoe size 5½ AA) of 1020 19th st. nw. She tests a lot of oxygen equipment for naval aircraft daytimes. And in her spare time in the evening she slips into even prettier clothing and models same for the newspaper ads. Modeling is a hobby and she does it whenever it doesn't interfere with her night school where she is studying higher physics.

Actually, Lucille is in the mechanical instrument section at the Bureau of Standards. Every once in awhile, when she has a new gadget to test out for the flier boys, she puts on an oxygen mask, some flying togs and crawls into a 10-foot high gray tank that looks like a big boiler. Right there in the office. Somebody on the outside turns the knobs until inside—where Lucille is—the pressure is what it would be on a plane flying at 40,000 feet.

Lucille then looks at all of the instruments through her goggles and takes a lot of notes which the Navy finds useful.

"It's the sort of thing I never learned when I was working for my degree in physics at Goucher College in Baltimore," she said.

G. M. Barnard, ICC Member, Dies in Home

George M. Barnard, 67, a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, died unexpectedly of a heart attack late Sunday night at his home, 2 Worthington dr., Westmoreland Hills, Md.

Mr. Barnard

Mr. Barnard, an attorney and a native of New Castle, Ind., was appointed by the late President Roosevelt to the commission on May 31, 1944, to complete the unexpired term of the late Joseph B. Eastman. The term was due to end December 31, 1950.

One of the four Republicans on the 11-man ICC, he took office in December, 1944, and, under the rotation system served as chairman during the year 1946.

A graduate of the law school of the University of Michigan, he was named prosecuting attorney in Henry County, Ind., in 1906, and subsequently was elected Mayor of New Castle.

He later served as a member of the Indiana Public Service Commission. He resigned in 1922 to enter the law firm of Samuel M. Ralston and Frederick Van Nuys, both former United States Senators.

Reappointed to the Indiana Public Service Commission in 1941, Mr. Barnard served with that agency until appointment to the ICC.

Mr. Barnard leaves his wife, Mrs. Marion Barnard and six children, Mrs. James W. Forgie, Cynwyd, Pa.; Mrs. Andrew J. Sordoni, jr., Forty Fort, Pa.; Mrs. Raymond W. Steele, Ithan, Pa.; Mrs. William W. Lewis Browne, Rabbi, Author, Fearing Blindness, Ends Life

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 3 (AP). Lewis Browne, 52, London-born rabbi, author and lecturer, committed suicide here today, police reported, by taking poison. He had been in ill health for years.

Mr. Browne

Police said Browne only yesterday left a hospital. Friends reported Browne feared approaching blindness. He left a note saying he had no fear of death.

Browne came to the United States in 1912, was educated at the University of Cincinnati, the Hebrew Union College and the Rabbinical Seminary. After postgraduate study at Yale, he married Myna Lisner in 1930, but they were divorced in 1941.

Browne was rabbi at Temple Israel in Waterbury, Conn., from 1920 to 1923, but divided his time with free lance writing. He organized and was president of the Newark Labor College. He resigned from the rabbinate in 1926 to devote his time exclusively to writing and lecturing.

Among his books were "The Story of the Jews," "This Believing World," "Beloved Spinoza" and "How Odd of God." He was a prolific producer of historical works and lectured at the University of California at Berkeley and Los Angeles on the history of civilization. He served as civilian lecturer on orientation for the War Department from 1942 to 1945.

Keneipp Tells Citizens' Group Of Drop in Traffic Fatalities

The District's declining traffic death rate is even more pronounced when computed on miles of travel than it is on a purely numerical basis, George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, said yesterday.

Keneipp spoke at the meeting of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association at the Mayflower Hotel.

The "exposure" factor—cumulative total of miles traveled by all vehicles during a year—is the most important element in examining accident and fatality figures, Keneipp said.

In 1942, he said, 108 deaths in the District amounted to 6 per 100 million miles of travel, but in 1943 the ratio rose to 7.4. However, figures for 1947, which recorded 72 deaths, break down to only 3.7, or approximately 50 per cent of the 1943 figure.

Mileage figures have not yet been compiled for last year, he said, adding that he believed the ratio would be even smaller than previous years, with but 67 deaths recorded.

The most significant fact noted in his three years as traffic director, Keneipp said, is the lack of consideration by motorists of pedestrians' rights.

He told the group there are 175,000 licensed vehicles in the city, and an average of 200,000 out-of-town cars enter each day. The bulk of the latter, he said, come from Maryland and Virginia and are daily users of the city's streets.

Col. E. Goring Bliss, association president, read a reply from the group's request for escalators in the Dupont Circle underpass.

The letter pointed out that the cost of such equipment would be prohibitive, $650,000 to equip all nine entrances and $140,000 for two sets only. It also mentioned that the vertical depth of the staircases is 18 feet, and it was felt that escalators should not be installed for depths of less than 30 feet.

Georgetown Group Asks Pre-Inaugural Cleanup

A cleanup of the city for the inauguration was urged last night by the Progressive Citizens of Georgetown, meeting in the parish hall of Christ Episcopal Church, 31 and O sts. nw.

A resolution urged waste paper and other trash especially be cleaned from Georgetown streets and sidewalks, as well as rubbish from yards.

The group urged other citizens' associations of the area to join in the movement.

Citiizens' Unit to Study Rail-Crossing Project

Manor Park Citizens Association last night instructed its sanitation and roads committee to study plans for either an overpass or underpass on Sheridan st. at Blair rd. nw., for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks.

Nearly 75 members attended last night's brief meeting at Whittier School, 5th and Sheridan sts. nw. The project would eliminate a dangerous grade crossing, it was asserted.

Razing of Playground Garage Again Urged

The Southwest Citizens Association last night requested the District Commissioners to raze the old Harbor Garage on Jefferson Playground by next July, as previously promised.

The meeting, attended by more than 100 persons, was held in the Southwest Branch Library, 7th and H sts. sw.

Last January the Commissioners had agreed to remove the structure "within 15 or 18 months," Frank M. Hurst, group president, said. He recently received a letter stating the Commissioners wished to put off the work another year, he told the association.

Used by the War Assets Administration during the war, the structure is now occupied by the District paint shop.

The association also asked that the through truck route be moved from C st. sw. to Constitution ave. It was pointed out that a child was killed on narrow C st. last fall, and use of the wider Constitution ave. would alleviate the dangers now existing.

Duffield to Direct Business Unit for Symphony's Drive

Hugh K. Duffield, general manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s Washington stores, will head the business committee for the National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund drive, it was announced yesterday.

a resident of Indianapolis, Ind., he the past year, Duffield has been with the company 20 years. As a resident of Indianapolis, Ind., he was director of the Chamber of Commerce, director of the Indiana Chain Store Council and chairman of the Indianapolis Symphony.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Woman Who Stayed With Parents Until Their Death Feels That Elder Brothers and Sister Owe Her Support for Life; Do They?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How much responsibility, financial and moral, should one accept towards a younger member of a family? How great is the debt of allegiance owed by elder brothers and sister to one who stayed home to take care of aged parents, after the others married?

After our parents died, a few years ago, my youngest sister, Sara, left our town, where she felt her opportunities were limited, and went to a larger city to further her musical ability as a pianist. Our two brothers, Dan and Tom, who are married, contributed generously to her careerist endeavor, Tom doing so without his wife's knowledge, but now she's learned of it and is very indignant.

Mrs. Tom will not permit him to contribute more money to Sara in any circumstances; and my husband takes the same attitude. Yet Sara has always felt that inasmuch as she stayed on with our parents to the end; also because she is the youngest, we therefore should always help her financially.

She's a Divorcee Without Security

DAN, the elder brother, still feels a family responsibility towards Sara, but to complicate matters, she has been married and divorced since branching out, and now has a child 18 months old. She finds it difficult to work due to poor health and the everlasting problem of finding competent baby-care, and feels, as always, that we three should cope on her behalf—as her former husband is doing very little for her.

In brief, she feels that my brothers and myself should contribute regularly and substantially to the support of herself and child; and also she would like to make her home with one or another of us, now that our parents are gone. Frankly, I am beside myself with anxiety, wondering what policy to propose or what stand to take; and would much appreciate your advice. R. B.

Probably Thirtyish; Unjustified Sponger

DEAR R. B.: The fact that Sara took wing to the city in student quest of musical fame after her parents' death a few years ago, and then branched off in another direction by getting married and having a child, suggests that she probably isn't more than "thirtyish" now.

So, if that's a pretty close estimate of her age, her assumption that she's entitled to a free ride through life, from here on out, at her brothers' and sister's expense, just doesn't make sense, no matter how she argues it.

Her happenstance status as youngest of four children doesn't entitle her to leech perennially on substance acquired by senior members of the family circle, after she has reached adult age and taken the bit in her teeth, so to speak, in the matter of "living her own life."

Life With Parents Too Pampered

MOREOVER, I feel that in justice to all nothing special is owed her, beyond what was freely bestowed in that period, for having stayed with her parents for some years after you others had married,—or until their death, which left her footloose and free to write her own ticket. As for what she was given, in guilty or grateful recompense from the donors' viewpoint, it must have been plenty, to judge by her conditioned expectation of neverending generous subsidy.

Sara's performance since being orphaned, and especially her feeling that annuity-support is owed her by family, suggests that her life-situation in the service of parents was more pampered than punitive, rather too-cushioned by sentimental thankoffering, with the result that, although fairly mature in age, she is absurdly "spoiled" and immature in character.

By norm standards of adult self-reliance, Sara's demands on family are infantile. She is working a sympathy racket, probably patterned on parental example, that dates back years; and at this point she desperately wants to recoup a "protected child" status in relation to somebody. However, it's not too late for her to grow, and some pretty stern prodding in that direction, administered with emergency aid, might turn the tide, if first-hand psychiatric counsel were also supplied. Newspaper Duel

If the children have been in the house overlong and the weather is still not good enough for them to go out, a little active play is in order.

One of the simplest ways to get some good physical exercise is through a newspaper duel. The youngsters are blindfolded and stand close to one another. Each is equipped with a not-too-thick roll of newspapers. At the signal, each attempts to hit the other. The feet may not be moved, but there may be as much ducking and dodging as possible.

Bystanders will enjoy the duel as much as the young "duelsters." The laughter that is evoked by wild swings and misses as well as by direct hits is a part of the fun and in itself is a relaxing thing.

Scores of the number of hits made by each contestant in a definite time period may be kept, or the game can be played purely for the fun of it.

Senator Margaret Smith Makes Plea To End Indonesian War; U. N. Threatened

By Genevieve Reynolds

Senator Margaret Chase Smith, shortly after donning the toga of her new office yesterday, appealed to the Queen of Holland to exercise her power to end the war in Indonesia. She made her entreaty at a luncheon given in her honor by the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., in the Statler Hotel.

"In my first statement as a United States Senator, I am prompted by what I know is in the hearts of American women, to call upon the Queen of Holland to exercise the power that is hers to stop the Dutch-Indonesian fighting," she told the audience of club leaders, top-ranking Army, Navy and Air Force officials plus a large sprinkling of feminine politicos and friends.

"The women of the world are on trial," she continued. "Queen Juliana by her individual decision can prove to the world, the will and the power of women for peace. Hers is an unprecedented opportunity for women."

Senator Smith prefaced her strong call to the Dutch Queen with the explanation, "The potency of the United Nations is threatened by the renewal of fighting in the Dutch-Indonesan war. Holland has defied the United Nations by starting what it calls 'police action'; people have been killed by the use of arms. If the United Nations fails to stop this war, then our own future is threatened."

Referring to her recent election, the only woman Senator declared to a round of applause, "I was not elected just because I am a woman. To the contrary, I was elected in spite of the fact that I am a woman. And that in itself was a victory for all women, for it smashed the unwritten tradition that the Senate is no place for a woman. The point that so many miss is that women do not blindly support some candidates just because they are women; we are not headed for the Amazonian world—rather that no one should be barred from public office just because she is a woman."

She said that perhaps the greatest significance of her victory is the growing realization that ability and proved performance, rather than sex, are the best standard for political selection just as much as they are for any other selection. "I like to think that I am the symbol of this growing realization," she added.

Pledged to Women

Senator Smith pledged herself to champion the view of women in the Senate but expressed a doubt that they would differ from men. "I have been repeatedly warned that while officially I will be the junior Senator from Maine, unofficially I will be the Senator at large for women all over the Nation."

She went on to point out that women, as well as men, are chiefly interested in world peace and domestic security."

However, she did list some subjects of primary interest to women, viz, curbs on inflation without bringing about deflation; the highest standard of living at the lowest possible cost; home they can afford to buy or rent; apartments where babies and dogs are not barred; reasonable food prices; adequate pay for teachers "who shape the lives of their children," and nutritious school lunches."

Then she pledged her full support to these measures, "not because they are the objectives of women, but because they are the objectives upon which must lay the foundation of America's future."

Lush Days Over

On the domestic front, she said there were "growing signs that we are approaching a buyers' market." "Women buyers," she explained, "are looking around for bargains. The lush days when everything sold at any price are over. This means that we are at last beginning to curb inflation and the country can thank the women mostly for this turn of events. For, it is the women who do most of the consumer buying."

Dr. K. Frances Scott of Northampton, Mass., president of the national BPW, introduced the guest of honor and shared the program with her in a 15-minute broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company's network.

In lieu of the proverbial orchid, Senator Smith was presented with a corsage of 225 congratulatory telegrams sent to her by the members of the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs throughout the Nation.

Urging the women to full participation in community and national life, Dr. Scott averred that the women had as much to contribute as men and should enter "out political life as full-time working citizens."

"Women's ideas and aspirations are apt to differ from men's and have as much right to be represented in government," she maintained. "In fact, our present governments today are sadly unbalanced—lopsided with the male viewpoint of values. Women are very nearly in a position of 'taxation without representation' and history teaches what happens in such cases."

She reminded the "gentler sex" that in this, the 101 year for women, they have the vote, constitute more than one half the population and have the power to put into elective offices those persons most favorable to the changes still needed in the legal status of women to wipe out discriminations based on sex.

Notables Present

Guests of honor at the luncheon included the Chief ow Naval Operations, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld; Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff of the United States Air Force; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Allen; Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster; Federal Communications Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock; Mrs. India Edwards, executive director, Women's Division, Democratic National Committee; Mrs. Robert Macauley, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee; Miss Genevieve Rogers, president of the D. C. BPW and member of the national board.

Also, Miss Anna Lord Strauss, president, League of Women Voters; Col. Katherine Towle, director of Women Marines, Navy Department; Capt. Joy Hancock, director of the Waves; Col. Mary G. Phillips, director, Army Nurses; Capt. Nellie Jane DeWitt, Nurses Corps, USN, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery; Emma E. Vogel, chief, Women's Medical Specialists Corps; Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president, General Federation of Women's Clubs, and two members of the national board who reside in the District—Miss Marguerite Rawalt and Miss Marjorie Webster.

THE two new distaff members of the House of Representatives—Mrs. Cecil M. Harden of Indiana (left) and Mrs. Reva Beck Bosone of Utah (center)—were introduced to the club leaders of the Nation by Miss Dorothy Barko (right), chairman of the Multi-Party Committee of Women, special train. Occasion was the reception given by the Committee of Women, Inc., yesterday afternoon in the Mayflower Hotel

Feminine House Members Feted

When the eight distaff members of the House of Representatives were sworn into office yesterday, they were cheered by a large delegation of women leaders from the Eastern Seaboard States. The some 100 in the group made a pilgrimage to the Nation's Capital to honor the Congresswomen at the opening session and again at a mammoth reception later in the afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel.

At the reception Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine shared honors with Representatives Reva Beck Bosone, Cecil M. Harden, Katharine St. George, Chase Going Woodhouse, Helen Gahagan Douglas, Frances P. Bolton, Edith Nourse Rogers, and Mary T. Norton. Receiving with the honorees were Mrs. Barko, Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, wife of the Hawaiian Delegate, and Mrs. Clifford Davis, wife of the Tennessee Representative; Dr. K. Frances Scott, Mrs. Jane McCauley, Mrs. India Edwards, Mrs. Davis, president of the Congressional Club, and Mrs. Farrington, president-elect of the National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, served as cochairmen of patronesses, and Miss Emma Dot Partride, a former director of the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., who sparked the Women-for Public-Office-Special-Train movement, introduced the guests.

The round of tribute-paying to the nine Congresswomen got under way at a breakfast given by the committee early yesterday morning at the Annapolis Hotel with Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, attorney for the United States Veterans' Administrator, as principal speaker.

Judge Howorth suggested that the women form "Task Force 49" for a definite program of action to get more women into elective and appointive jobs. "Women have barely established a beachhead in political and economic life," she explained. "It is almost unbelievable that an element which can cast more than a majority of votes is unwanted at the council table and is scarcely given crumbs when appointments are passed around."

The NEW Chase & Sanborn A New Secret Blend "Selecciones"

New Congresswoman Plugs for Peace, Sobriety

Ex-alcoholic Gave Reva Bosone a Cocktail Shaker; She Won't Use It

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE NEW CONGRESSWOMAN from Utah is a svelte redhead. A former Salt Lake City judge, Reva Beck Bosone, she's expert on such varied subjects as traffic, alcoholism, soil conservation. Her most passionate interest is peace—world peace.

Rep. Bosone

The judge claims she won her first political tussle, a seat in the Utah State Legislature, through the smooth campaigning technique of her then 3-year-old daughter, Zilpha. Zilpha handed out cards urging her Ma's election, following up each handout with a "Please vote for my m o m m y!" Afterward, many constituents told the judge they had voted just to please her daughter.

Anyway, Zilpha or no, Mrs. Bosone was the only woman ever elected floor leader in Utah.

During her two years' tenure she was responsible for passage of a child labor amendment, an unemployment insurance law, and she authored the State's minimum wage and hour law for women and children.

Because she liked debating, Representative Bosone determined to become a lawyer. Everyone, except her family, thought law a poor idea. "It's a rough profession!" they gloomed.

In Salt Lake City judges rotate to different courts. The day after her appointment to the Traffic Court a member of her family dropped a "ticket" on her desk. "What's that?" she asked. "A traffic ticket," came the surprised reply. "What do you expect me to do with it?" "Well, you're the traffic judge, aren't you?" Needless to say, the Bosone relative stepped up, paid his fine. Later, both friends and relations moaned it cost them $10 extra on every traffic offense—just because the judge was their pal.

A Police Court Judge

TO THE UNINITIATED, being a traffic court judge sounds a trifle monotonous. "Not at all," says the former judge, "it is fascinating." Each person is different, especially in his reaction to traffic offenses. She thinks traffic safety is a tremendous problem in this country and far from solved. Mrs. Bosone was elected judge in 1935, took over the Salt Lake City Police Court a year later.

When, under the rotation system, she had the choice of transferring to another court, every traffic and civic organization in Salt Lake City begged her to stay put—because her efforts had so greatly reduced traffic accidents. In 1945, Judge Bosone was reelected city judge for the third time, a six-year term, and the first nonpartisan election in city history.

Besides her judicial duties, the judge took on a part-time job as director of the Utah State Board on Alcoholism. Now Utah's program is one of the most advanced in the country and Alcoholics Anonymous is especially active in Salt Lake City. Mrs. Bosone knows most of the AA members well.

As she was leaving for Washington, a newspaper publisher, an important AA-er, presented her with a huge box. Opening it, she found a silver tray. "How nice, I can certainly use this," she said. "Dig deeper," he urged. In the tissue wrapping nestled a jumbo silver cocktail shaker!

The publisher and several of his friends asked her what she intended serving them from the shaker—when they came to Washington. "Ice water!" exclaimed the judge firmly.

At the moment, the shaker and tray are still in Salt Lake City being suitably engraved. But, unless Washington makes miraculous transformation, all any of the Congresswoman's guests will imbibe is frigid aqua pura. Mrs. Bosone doesn't object to liquor, she just doesn't serve it.

Interested in Conservation

JUDGE BOSONE was an official observer at the initial United Nations Conference in San Francisco. The experience thrilled her, and she is firmly convinced that world peace can be maintained only through U. N. effort.

She was shocked that the Republican Eightieth Congress avoided appropriating funds for the U. N. Building until called back to special session last summer.

Soil conservation and reclamation, important to Utah, interest her tremendously. Flying here, the new Representative noticed that neighboring rivers are being silt-clogged. Naturally, she hopes to become a member of Congress' Reclamation Committee.

So far, Congresswoman Bosone is installed in a Washington hotel. Zilpha, now a smart, reed-slim 18, is here, too, and will probably transfer to a Washington college. Last fall, she again campaigned vigorously for her mother, this time using methods more mature but equally effective.

Mrs. Bosone dresses decoratively. The other day at a party given by India Edwards, she wore a handsome gray numero covered with cut steel beads.

Work for Sense of Balance To Correct an Awkward Gait

By Ida Jean Kain

If you'd like a college course in walking, step right up and join the class. Our favorite physical education professor is presiding, and the following walk-classifications are the ones she gives as horrible examples.

* * * *

First, there's the "don't-care walk"—a loose-jointed stride with forward hips, exaggerated knee bend, and a heels-first landing... gallump. Not a single redeeming feature—the entire line-up is out kilter. Done on concrete, it's quite a jar.

In the "turkey walk," the feet are too far ahead, and the body has to be pulled forward to keep up with them. Consequently the head is thrust out with every step in a sort of pecking motion.

The "bustle walk" is a short-stepped affair with a complete transfer of weight from side to side. The rear view presents a hip-swinging effect, on the order of the rhumba. It's not slimming—in fact, it's a bustle-maker.

The "heel-kerplunk walk" is the one least to be desired in the apartment overhead. The heel comes down first, and comes down hard—every move is loudly accented. This is a spine-jolter, and nerve-wracking on all concerned.

To this gallery of ungainly gaits let's add the "shipboard roll," characterized by a list from side to side—old-salt style. And the "loafer shuffle," the half-slide, half-flop so common among bobby-soxers.

It seems odd that there should be so many variations of the simple movement of placing one foot ahead of the other . . . particularly when any one of the above is twice as difficult as the right way.

Walking is simply good posture in smooth motion. All the familiar rules apply: head high, shoulders relaxed, chest lifted and middle muscles up and in, hip muscles contracted, toes pointed straight ahead. The legs should swing smoothly back and forth from the hips, like pendulums, and the body should move as a supple unit—not disjointedly. That way the head remains on a lovely level instead of bobbing up and down or thrusting forward.

In correcting a poor walk, work for a sense of balance. Keep the chest in line with the forward foot so that body alignment isn't thrown off, and watch your step—when the heel touches, the weight is shifted down the foot more toward the outer than the inner border, and the toes grip and shove off. An easy knee-bend prevents foot scraping or shuffling.

How to Go About Relocating Friend

Can you tell me how one may locate an old friend? About 20 years ago a very close friend of mine moved to Portland, Oreg. We corresponded for about five years, then the correspondence dwindled and finally ceased. I should like very much to know how I might find her, if living. I have lost her address and do not know how to go about trying to locate her.

W. M. O.

The General Reference Room of the Congressional Library has both the telephone book and city directory for Portland, Oreg., as well as those of other large cities in the country. If your friend is still living in that city, she should be listed in one of them. If her name does not appear in the diectory perhaps an advertisement in the personals column of the leading Portland newspapers would bring you news of your friend from someone who knew her there. You can get the newspaper names and addresses from the Portland telephone book.

If these suggestions prove fruitless, the only alternative I would have would be to employ an investigation service which specializes in finding missing persons.

Can you recommend a book or pamphlet on the use of herbs in cookery? M. J. W.

"Magic in Herbs" by Leonie de Sounin (published by M. Barrows Co., Inc., New York) is a very complete discussion of the use of herbs in all types of cookery. In the Family Circle magazine for November, 1948, there is a guide to herb cookery. A reproduction of this guide on cardboard suitable for framing or attaching to the wall can be had by sending 20 cents to the Food Editor, the Family Circle magazine, 25 W. 45th st., New York, 19, N. Y.

Can you recommend any product for filling in the crack between panels of insulation board? We have tried patching plaster and spackle but they soon crack.

Because vibration loosens the filler, it is difficult to apply a crack filler to these cracks which will not in time crack and fall out. The surest way to do away with the trouble is to apply a wood strip trim to cover the cracks after they have been filled. This can be purchased at lumber yards and comes ¼ inch thick and 1½ inch wide.

Can you tell me with what a whipped cream filling like the kind used in commercial pastries is combined to make a more substantial filling? I find that both my custard and whipped cream fillings run out and are mashed flat when the top layer is put on it.

H. A. W.

Bakeries use both custard or marshmallow fillings for their pastries. As I understand it, the marshmallow filling is made from a powder and is mixed as used. I have not been able to find either a retail or wholesale firm that sells the powder.

As for custard fillings, to make them stiffer use a larger amount of flour or cornstarch. Use the proportions given in recipes for cream fillings rather than those given for puddings. If you wish to combine the custard with whipped cream be sure that both the custard filling and whipped cream are chilled before combining them. When you use a custard-type filling in a layer cake, have both the cake and filling cold before it is placed onto the cake and allow it to stand on the cake for 10 or 15 minutes before placing on the top layer. This will prevent the weight of the top layer from pressing the filling out before it has had a chance to become set.

D. C. Deposits Hold Virtually Steady in 1948

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined deposits of Washington's 19 banks showed remarkable stability in the past 12 months, a compilation by The Washington Post indicated last night.

The aggregate of $1,020,265,787 as of December 31, 1948, was less than 1 per cent under the $1,023,675,352 on December 31, 1947. For the statistically minded, the exact change was $3,409,565 down or 0.03 per cent lower.

The deposit total at year end was up $841,742 from the $1,019,424,045 on June 30, 1948.

Thirteen of the institutions reported moderate dips in deposits for the year, while six displayed increases.

Hamilton National Bank returned to third place in total deposits here. National Savings & Trust Co. went back to fourth place, having nosed out Hamilton on the June 30 report. National Savings & Trust still showed the biggest individual deposit gain for the year, although its total went down in the last six months.

Riggs National Bank, in first place, showed a gain of about 10 million.

Latest deposit reports of individual banks compared with last year as follows:

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Hiram S. Hart, former president of the District of Columbia Life Insurance Managers Association, has been appointed superintendent of agencies for the Berkshire Life Insurance Co. Hart for many years also was active in the local Underwriters Association . . . Harry B. Brown, former Philco Corp. national merchandising manager, has been retained as merchandising consultant by Crosley Motors . . . Robert Ramspeck and Brig. Gen. Milton W. Arnold, of the Air Transport Association, will be guest speakers of the National Capital Forge of the American Public Relations Association at a dinner tomorrow night in Hotel Lafayette . . . Carl Monsees will speak today at a luncheon meeting of the local chapter of Association of American Executives in Sheraton Hotel.

BOOSTS SURPLUS: Directors of Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. have authorized the transfer of $100,000 to surplus, President T. Howard Duckett announced yesterday. This makes surplus account one million dollars. Capital consists of $600,000 and undivided profits $290,000.

ODD LOTS: F. A. O. Schwarz, New York toy dealer established in 1862, has leased a two-story building on 14th st. adjoining Garfinckel's and plans to open for business before spring . . . Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania plans to sell 25 million dollars' worth of 25-year debentures at competitive bidding . . . The steel industry will operate at 100 per cent of capacity this week, heaviest tonnage output of any similar week on record . . . Establishment of 50 new industries in the Pittsburgh area last year is attributed largely to the Supreme Court decision ruling out the basing point system . . . Durkee Famous Foods reduced the wholesale price of margarine 2 cents a pound yesterday.

WILL MOVE HERE: The Federation for Railway Progress has set January 15 as date for moving its headquarters from Cleveland to Washington. The federation, whose founder and chairman is Robert R. Young, will occupy the building at 1430 K st. nw. Besides the federation's executive offices, the building will house the passenger relations department, shippers service bureau and the editorial offices of the organization's monthly magazine known as Railway Progress. Thomas J. Deegan, jr., is president of the federation.

FEDERAL BUYING: Experience of the Armed Services with negotiated procurement, as contrasted with competitive bidding, will be discussed Wednesday at a meeting sponsored by the Washington Chapter of the Society for Advancement of Management. Speaker will be Rear Admiral Morton L. Ring, chairman of the Procurement Policy Council of the Munitions Board. The meeting will start at 7:30 p. m. in the Federal Personnel Council room of the Normandy Building and will be open to anyone interested.

SALES ESTIMATE: The magazine Sales Management estimates that retail sales over the Nation will be 4 per cent greater this month than in January, 1948. The publication predicted that retail sales this month would total $10,042,000,000, a sharp drop under December's 13 billion.

PLANS STOCK SPLIT: Norfolk's National Bank of Commerce plans a five-for-one splitup "in order to bring the price of the stock back into the reach of small investors." Stockholders will vote on the proposal January 11 to reduce the par value from $100 to $20 and that investors be given five shares of new stock for each share of old. Latest bid price is $222 a share, with none offered.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

McDonald, Wolff Will Air Ball Games

Details haven't been worked out yet, but present plans are to have a single crew of broadcasters handle both radio and television accounts of this summer's baseball games from Griffith Stadium.

Chesterfield, which will own both AM and TV rights, has been quietly dickering with Washington's two top sportscasters—Arch McDonald and Bob Wolff.

McDonald is the acknowledged dean of baseball broadcasters in this area, and to thousands of local fans the play-by-play accounts just aren't the same with another man behind the mike. Wolff is a former semipro diamond star whose radio and television work in the past four years have shot him into the big time.

A third man, to handle color and commercials, will be named when technical difficulties are ironed out, and a formal announcement is made. Howard Williams has the inside track.

Meantime, stay-at-home fans seem assured of the best Nat coverage in years. The pity is, there won't be much to cover.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill.

There appears to be a controversy about carrier boys leaving their newspapers in a safe, dry place on inclement days.

Ours has been very good about putting the paper inside the screen door whenever there is a chance of rain, snow or unusual winds.

His only peculiarity seems to be that he never comes around to collect for his trouble. We haven't seen him since we moved in here, back in November.

R. G. Brown
(No address)

Dear Mr. Brown:

Tell us where you live, and we'll see if we can talk the boy into accepting some money. It seldom requires much persuasion.

Bill

MISCELLANY

The most provocative note in yesterday's mail bag was from little Susie Derman of 5915 Pontiac st., Berwyn Heights, Md., who wrote: "I got my two front teeth for Christmas, and they came in a little box. My mother says she will glue them in." . . . Our recent reference to the troubles of a "391-year-old woman" brought sharp rejoinders from Pat Kaiser of 17 Revell st., Annapolis, Md.; "District Liner Cable" of Dumfries, Va., and Marshall A. Martin of Herndon, Va. . . . Judging by those addresses, that typo was in the "State" edition only, and was corrected by the time the "City" went to press . . . Streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital have been received from R. B. Fowler of the R. F. C.; Pat Ward of Hood College, Frederick, Md., and Barbara Ruth Goldberg of 4829 3d st. nw. . . . J. L. Jackson of 2403 Congress st. se. tells me about a group of Shipley Terrace folks who are organizing a church and need a piano to help them get started. Anybody who can help is asked to call Axminster 4888 for additional details . . . Barbara Harrison, who is "12 going on 13," and her sister Sheila, who is "6 going on 7," have turned a portion of their home at 5308 43d st. nw. into a business establishment of sorts. Barbara and Sheila are in the potholder business, weaving their own merchandise and selling the potholders for 25 cents each—of which 10 cents goes to the March of Dimes. Barbara says she'll be glad to take phone orders on Woodley 1192. . . . John A. Smith of 830 Jefferson st. nw. wonders what our morning contemporary meant when it spoke of a "miximum of police protection."

HERE'S YOUR CHANCE, GIRLS! HE'S SINGLE

Charles Lane of 1826 N. Capitol st. is a modest young man, according to his mother. But nevertheless, we're going to have to print Charlie's picture in the paper.

The reason is that Master Lane has just won first local prize in the National Children's Photograph Contest, and has placed fourth among all children entered.

Mrs. Ethel Williams, studio manager for the local G. C. Murphy store at 1214 G st. nw., took the picture when Charlie was 1 year old.

If I thought she could do as well with wrinkles as she does with dimples, I'd stop in for a sitting myself.

PERSONAL NOTES

District Liner: Your war stamps will be forwarded to Children's Hospital.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Frances H. Rees of 2231 California st. nw. finds this description of a goat with regular habits in the classified columns of one of our afternoon contemporaries:

"Goat, female. Home until 2 p. m. daily, all day on Sunday."

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK. — Whittaker Chambers' resignation as senior editor of Time Magazine was submitted several months ago. It was made effective in December because that's when the senior editors qualify for substantial pension benefits for the calendar year . . . J. P. McEvoy, the magazine writer, was in Moscow as a guest of Ambassador Smith. McEvoy got his Russian visa by submitting a UP interview of 1932 in which he had spoken favorably of the schools in Russia . . . The Capitol Theater isn't displaying any Burt Lancaster posters during his current engagement. The first two posters, 8 feet high, were carried off by bobby-soxers, and the third one was too smeared with lipstick.

Robert Morley, of "Edward, My Son," was interviewed by an Australian newspaperman who took notes in shorthand. Morley, who is a Socialist, denounced the Conservatives, and when the reporter finally asked: "May I quote you?" Morley told him: "Please don't. It would upset the Conservatives, but do me no good" . . . George Jessel describes a Hollywood relative as one who makes up a package deal to guarantee you a capital-loss . . . Ed Murrow's album, "I Can Hear It Now," is such a spectacular success that he will spend the summer in Europe finding more recordings, and make it an annual project.

Somerset Maugham, who arrived here a few days ago, tells of his grandson, Nicky, who spent the war years in America and then was brought back to England. Maugham noticed his melancholy spells, and asked him: "What is it, Nicky?" The youngster sighed: "Oh, I'm fine, except that every once in a while I keep thinking—'Gee, I wish I had a coke'" . . . Four of Maugham's short stories, incidentally, have been made into a movie, "Quartette," which soon will be released here. In originality and high quality, it's in the best tradition of Britain's recent film exports, and will bring to producers the realization that the untapped short-story field can successfully be adapted . . . Of the 10 Maugham stories submitted to the censor he at first rejected 9 of them, but finally approved 4 when changes were agreed on.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN?
WELL, CONFIDENTIALLY, I GOT THE IMPRESSION THAT THE SISTER WOULD LIKE TO HOOK ME!
HOOK YOU? WITH ALL THE MONEY SHE'S GOT? YOU'RE CERTAINLY AN OPTIMIST! SHE WAS PROBABLY JUST TRYIN' TO BE SOCIABLE!
I HOPE THAT WAS IT, BECAUSE SHE DEFINITELY ISN'T MY TYPE—AND I WOULDN'T WANT TO HURT GIGGLEHEIMER'S FEELINGS!
WHO? MISS GIGGLEHEIMER? OH! YES, HE'S HERE! JUST A MINUTE — I'LL CONNECT YOU!

Real Estate Lobby Again at Work

By Drew Pearson

Suggestion to Democratic House leaders: Two of the most efficient tools of the real estate lobby in the late lamented Eightieth Congress were Congressmen Charles Fletcher of San Diego (Rep.) and John Riley of Sumter, S. C. (Dem.).

Pearson

Cleverly placed on the banking and currency committee by the real estate lobby, these two tipped the balance against the public housing bill—a defeat which helped contribute to Mr. Truman's reelection.

These real estate Congressmen have now been defeated by two up-and-coming young Democrats who campaigned on this same issue—public housing. They are: Hugo Sims of Orangeburg, S. C., and Clinton McKinnon of San Diego. The real estate lobby is already pulling strings to keep them off the banking and currency committee. How about showing the lobby how the Eighty-first Congress stands by putting them on?

Forrestal vs. Forrestal

Senators who are studying Defense Secretary Forrestal's demand for sweeping power over the Secretaries for Air, Army, and Navy, can't help remembering one thing which the public may have forgot. The James Forrestal who now demands such sweeping power is the very same James Forrestal who, with his Wall Street partner, wrote the national defense setup which he now complains about.

Senators are also inclined to believe that when a man fails at a job important to the national security, he should not get a second chance to make another failure.

Actually, Forrestal is the victim of his own lobbying.

When President Truman, as a result of his senatorial work on the Truman Committee, proposed unification of the Army and Navy, Forrestal, then Secretary of the Navy, waged a vigorous, poorly concealed campaign against it.

Forrestal's campaign was so successful that he was finally asked what combination of the armed forces would suit him; so he brought in his old Wall Street partner, Ferdinand Eberstadt, to draft the answer. The compromise he drafted was called the "Eberstadt plan."

This loose-knit regrouping of the Army, Navy and Air Forces was what Congress eventually bought and is in effect today. In it Forrestal and Eberstadt purposely set up the loose controls which Forrestal now complains about.

Eberstadt Called Back

Later, Herbert Hoover, charged with the job of reorganizing the executive branch of the Government, called Eberstadt back and asked him to head the committee reviewing the success of unification. There was considerable protest against this inside the Hoover commission, for it violated a well-founded American principle that a man should not sit as judge in reviewing his own decisions.

That principle was discarded, however, and Mr. Hoover decreed that Eberstadt should sit as judge to decide if his own unification plan was working. The result was as could be expected.

Eberstadt found little wrong with the Eberstadt plan.

Eberstadt and Jim Forrestal have fought many battles shoulder-to-shoulder. They were not only partners in Dillon Read & Company back in the days when their firm poured millions into Germany, but they were partners in backing the military in the struggle against civilians in the War Production Board.

This time, however, Forrestal quietly split with his old partner. His plea last week for far-reaching power over the secretaries for Air, Navy and Army, shows the extent of the split. In making it he asked for violation of another long-standing American rule: When a man fails at a job important to the security of the nation, he does not get a chance to make another failure.

Plumber Frolics On Lofty London Statue of Eros

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—A plumber shinned up the huge statute of Eros today, broke the string and bent the biggest Cupid's bow in Britain.

Crows gathered in Piccadilly Circus while he scampered from one perch to atop the 40-foot aluminum statue of the Greek god of love. Rush hour traffic piled up for blocks.

There was a roar when the climber clutched at the bow, and snapped the string. Teetering dangerously, he hung on, waved his hat and shouted to the crowds.

Firemen with ladders hauled him down. Police said he was William Painter. They charged him with drunkenness and causing malicious damage.

RFC Reports Profit Of 18 Million in Year

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation reported to Congress yesterday it operated at a "profit" of $18,179,941 during the fiscal year ended last June 30.

That was the amount left after deducting expenses, interest costs and a set-aside for losses from $46,506,561 in income obtained from interest, dividends and fees on loans made by the RFC.

The RFC's administrative expenses were listed at $14,398,949. Interest paid on money borrowed from the Treasury plus some minor costs brought total expenses to $20,650,655. The set-aside for losses was $7,675,965.

Dedication

I contemplate the passing world . . . And with my pen in hand . . . I dedicate these lines to all . . . The humble of the land . . . To all who look upon their deeds . . . With modesty and grace . . . And do not feel entitled to . . . A more important place . . . It matters not how rich they are . . . Or whether they are poor . . . No more than if they happen to . . . Be famous or obscure . . . As long as they appreciate . . . The blessings that are theirs . . . And give their gratitude to God . . . In unpretentious prayers . . . I dedicate my efforts to . . . The ones who do their part . . . Sincerely and completely with . . . Humility of heart.
